Has Resumed Business in His Old Tub

AND PRESENTS HIS ADVERTISEMENT

To the Reading Public—The Tub of Love and the Lantern of Passion - The Pharisee.

[illegible]

Tub and Lantern.

Tubs of Taste.

ALL TUBS EXECUTED WITH NEATNESS AND DISPATCH.

ALL WARRANTED LANTERNS GUARANTEED.

Address,

PROF. DIOGENES, C. P.,

34 Honest Way, Four Doors Below the Street Called Straight.

Citizens: I take pleasure in announcing to the public that I have resumed business at the old stand and would respectfully call the attention of my ancient patrons to the fact that I have recently laid in a new and complete stock of tubs and lanterns of the latest improved styles and patterns. I would call attention to my advertisement in the daily papers and to my apprehensive hangers and bolsters distributed here in the business marts of the community. For further particulars see small bills.

An Axiom Amended. Every man in his own tub, and every lantern ablaze to illuminate the way that leads to dusty death.' Thus for the dominie—lanterns for reverdunes, &c. Catalogues may be had on application.

I would call special attention to my improved Tub of Content. The man or woman who dwells in this fragile structure may never know sorrow, but I do not promise that the tub will endure a lifetime. It will doubtless need frequent repairs. The Lantern of Illumination is one of the attachments of the Tub of Content, and, supplied with the Oil of Faith, will cast a pale, steady light upon all imperfections of the tub. I recommend this outfit to aged persons of either sex and especially to Old Maids.

I also offer a modern affair called the Tub of Eloquence. Demosthenes and Cicero used one of the ancient sort, but the orator of later times turns my tub bottom side up, and utters himself aswine from the eminence thereof, with forthright simplicity. Tubs of Eloquence of every variety for sale or rent. These tubs may be utilized as pulpits, rostrums, platforms or stumps. They will be found peculiarly adapted to the use of preachers who love the wandering sheep with the music of the mellifluous mouth; the sensational lecturer who goes forth from the shadow of his crimes or his sin to devour the dollars of the Human Fool, will also find the Tub of Incomparable Utility, for it is associated with the snobbistry of the charlatans of all age from Annanias to Cagliostro, and there to the day before yesterday, when your passing acquaintance fancied you out of sundry shekels under promise to pay "next Saturday night." As a convention platform or a political stump this tub is without a rival, even among hogsheads: from its pinnacle you may "view with alarm," or you may "point with pride." You may "re-affirm" and you may "prevaricate" the association. You may successfully defeat your "constituents" and torment your political enemies. You may hang your Lantern of Jaggery on the outer rail and by its dim, sacrilegious light you shall observe "a sea of upturned faces," as blankly receptive of the stupid lies you are uttering as a cracked mirror in a cheap lodging house.

Here is an article in the tub line that I do not recommend to anybody. It is called the Tub of Love. This is the only tub in my establishment that I do not warrant. You must take your chances when you buy this tub as you take chances in buying a lottery ticket or a pool ticket on a crooked horse race. And yet I recommend the Tub of Love to the half world of mortal fools and to the other half world of congenital idiots. Attached to the Tub of Love is the Lantern of Passion. Ah, but this is a wonderful lantern—not as versatile in its material results as was the wonderful lamp of Aladdin, nor as brilliant, perhaps, as an electric light on a tall pole, but by its light the love sick maniac may view the object of affection as through prismatic vistas, followed by shifting rainbow tints, such as the lotus eaters dream of. Sometimes the light glares with torrid intensity, radiating great lines of garish color, crimson and orange and purple, and then the object of the lover looms like a gilded mosque in the vision of the true believer. Again the light of this lantern is soft and clear, and though it magnifies the virtues while half concealing the faults of the Object it assists to a more accurate understanding than at any other time. The Lantern of Passion is deceptive at all times. Its light is so intense that all beyond its scope is in utter darkness, and out of this darkness of enemies leap phantom forms and gibbering ghosts to affright the heart of the brave and resolute and to make pale the cheek of beauty through even the rouge of vanity. In this outer darkness are unknown evils, lurking like hyenas in a graveyard until the light of love shall grow dim that they may emerge to feed upon broken hearts. The more intense the light from the Lantern of Passion, the deeper the darkness round about, and the more ravenous those unclean things of the night—the hyenas that raven the tombs of departed hopes, the gallows birds that peck the eyes of suicides whose Lantern of Passion has flickered to its socket and sputtered to oblivion; the buzzards ever circling where men and women repose in fancied security, ever alert for the light to resolve itself once more into its original element of darkness, that they may swoop and rend and tear until not one shred of love shall cling to the skeleton of hope. I am offering this Tub of Love and this Lantern of Passion at an exorbitant price, hoping that nobody will buy, but, bless my cynical soul, if it isn't the best paying stock in my shop. Everybody wants it—the old fool tottering to his grave; the young fool with a happy future smiling in his face; the poverty stricken fool who pawns his lean soul to the foul fiend to raise the price of the tub and his subsequent but inevitable misery; the rich fool seeking the tub and lantern that he may find a lithe and willowy toy with a handsome face and a dearth of intellect to learn too late, perhaps, that the clutch of tiger's claws are on his throat and a tiger's fangs gnawing at his vitals; the woman who yearns, the maiden who knows no better; the roue and the philanthropist; the coward and the hero; the good and the wicked; the just and the unjust; all, all eagerly crowding the mart of Diogenes to purchase an article that he will not warrant, and for which he charges a thousand times its intrinsic value! Had I no other tubs or lanterns in my shop I could ransom my old friend Alexander from the Persians with the proceeds of a single day's sales in this line of goods alone, and yet I know that the tub is rotten and that the lantern is explosive.

I have on hand several styles of tubs suitable for lay orators. My Tub of the Pharisee is a very gorgeous affair, constructed of the cedar of Lebanon and hooped with gold of Ophir. It is inlaid with Pride and he who dwells within is Holier than Thou by at least nine prayers and three embezzlements. This tub is fitted up with elegantly upholstered pews and a commercial bucket shop in which to transact the superficial honesty of the Pharisee. There are secret pigeon holes in which Trusts are concealed beneath tapestries garnished with alluring promises, plausible protestations, and lying explanations. Over the edge of this tub crawls a huge spider weaving his web as he goes, and the Pharisee prays within.

Tubs and lanterns! Tubs and lanterns! Tubs for every occupation and pleasure of life; tubs of philosophy and tubs of frivolity; tubs for every age and condition—tubs, tubs, tubs. Lanterns for the wise and lanterns for the foolish; lanterns to light the pathway of sorrow and lanterns to make plain the downward road; lanterns for honest men, that their feet may not stray from the highway of rectitude, and lanterns for dishonest men, that their feet may not stray into the thoroughfare that leads to jail; lanterns for the husband seeker, and lanterns for the fortune hunters; lanterns that reveal the motives of men, and lanterns the light of which distorts and exaggerates—lying lights that flicker, and flare, and flash.

Tubs and Lanterns! Tubs and Lanterns!

DIOGENES.

HER LETTER.

A Little Oakland Girl Writes to an Editor's Wife.

A little Oakland girl away from home has been writing a letter to Mrs. E. A. Otis, wife of the editor of the Los Angeles Times, and here it is:

LOS ANGELES, June, 1889.

Dear Mrs. Otis: I have been reading the little girls' letters, so I thought I would write, too.

I live a little way from Lancaster, and Lancaster is sixty miles from Los Angeles. I don't like it here very well. I have only been here two months. I came down on the cars from Oakland. It is a beautiful place, and it doesn't look anything like this place. While I was living there mamma and I got on the boat and went over to San Francisco. We went to the Golden Gate Park and out to the Cliff House.

Then we went to Woodward's Garden. I saw tigers, and lions, and an alligator, and a giraffe. And there were beautiful birds and stuffed animals.

I gave a monkey a piece of cake. There was another monkey in the same cage, and I gave it a piece of bread, and it would not eat it, because the other monkey had a piece of cake. There were a great many more animals there than I have mentioned here.

There were the loveliest flowers in Golden Gate Park that I ever saw.

We ate our dinner by the beach.

We saw seals out on the rocks.

Once the tide came nearly catching me. I wanted to wade in the tide, but mamma would not let me.

That night I was so tired I could hardly stand up. O, I had a fine time that day.

I think San Francisco and Oakland are two of the prettiest cities in California.

My school will commence in October. I study geography, spelling, arithmetic and reading, drawing and writing.

Well, I have written enough, so I will close. I hope you like my letter.

Yours truly, GRACE OTIS.

Is He Man or Gorilla?

Indianapolis Sentinel.

A naked, hairy creature, which from descriptions given by reliable persons who have seen him, must be a young gorilla, was seen recently by various persons in the woods and cornfields six miles south of Eckerty. Mrs. Kate Knight and Oscar Grant, besides others, are the names given as eye witnesses, and each person named saw him on diffrent occasions. Robinson's show is on the river between New Albany and Evansville, and it is supposed a gorilla escaped from it.

Mrs. Newmarried—You went sailing last night, didn't you?

Mr. N.—No, indeed! Why do you ask?

Mrs. N.—Oh! nothing, only I heard you tell Mr. Nextdoor that you ran across a cold deck, so I supposed you were out sailing.

THE INS AND OUTS.

The Ins Would Still Exclude the Outs.

THE STRUGGLE TO GET INTO SOCIETY.

Some Amusing Anecdotes of Mrs. George Westinghouse's Siege to New York Society.

The perpetual struggle on the part of the new rich to make their way into the circles of New York society is productive of many amusing incidents, some of which are related by a correspondent of the Chicago News.

One of the most interesting of these struggles just now is that of Mrs. George Westinghouse, wife of the man who invented the air brake, and who is in consequence rich beyond the dreams of avarice. The scene of the battle of the millions goes on at Lenox. Lenox, which every season becomes more and more the fashionable autumn resort, has been the scene of a good many such struggles, for somehow the would bes have a conviction that at this point is a breach in the wall where they are more likely to penetrate to the citadel than elsewhere. The Pulitzers went there for a year or two, for the great journalist has built up for himself an annual income of $1,000,000, and his handsome wife began to feel social longings stirring within her. They made pretty good headway, too; and then her husband's purchase of the crown diamonds of France suddenly filled her with monarchial aspirations and she set out for the other side of the world to repeat Mrs. Mackay's successful "Siege of London," and they say that it will not be long before the Pulitzer name and diamonds will figure at court balls and Sandringham garden parties. The Westinghouses have taken their place. The inventor himself is a quiet, clever man, whom everyone likes and who cares for little outside of his business, but his wife arouses the antagonism of all feminine Lenox, who declared, as with one voice, that millions or no millions, she might not dine in the light of their rich and exclusive countenance, and no power, not even that of Plutus, should force them to extend to her the slightest civility. But a good many people had heard much of that sort of talk before, and they promptly laid bets on the ability of money that was "out" to force itself in, and those long-headed people are beginning this season to cash in those same wagers. Mrs. Westinghouse had done nothing to arouse this earnest league against her except to rent a house at a fashionable resort and spend her summer there. But the femininity of the place penetrated her secret desire to bring her new millions into their circle and reign by right of them, and they were to a woman against any such division of power.

All last summer she sat alone in her gorgeous house, and no a woman in the place crossed the threshold or sent her a single square of pasteboard intimating the owner's desire to feed her or amuse her in any way. But they talked about her. They talked about very little else. She was the standing topic of conversation, and not a dinner party of the whole season escaped at least one anecdote about the woman whom all reiterated should never be allowed to share their high bred festivities. And she gave them something to talk about, too—precious food for gossips for which they were profoundly grateful. Perhaps no other aspirant for social honors ever dared be so eccentric before.

Personally she is rather a handsome woman, but she dresses in so remarkable a manner that one loses sight of her face and can only regard her clothes in dazzled astonishment. Upon her head she wears the weirdest of brass-colored wigs; not a "front," nor a "wave," nor any of those bits of additional hair with which women conceal the ravages of time, but a whole, entire wig of the theatrical sort, and with not the smallest attempt to conceal its aggressive wiriness, or make any artful effort to cause it to seem other than it is—a very cheap looking yellow wig. Her friends say that it is worn by the physicians' advice, for the cure of neuralgia; that her own hair has been almost destroyed by the remedies used to allay the pain; that the slightest touch of cold brings on cruel twinges, and that since she must wear this head covering she is determined to make no effort to deceive others as to its exact nature. Her ideas of the fitness of things kept the New York woman whose one desire in life is absolute and faultless "correctness" in dress—in a chronic state of speechless astonishment.

Mrs. Westinghouse is a clever horsewoman and rides frequently a beautiful blooded mare, whose pedigree rivals the Plantagenets. Whenever she took her rides abroad last summer she got herself up in the most perfect of London cut. Quorn cut habits, with a silk hat and dogskin gloves of the approved type; but she invariably hooked into the belt of her habit skirt a large silver chatelaine with twenty or more belongings, so that she unintombulated upon her way much after the fashion of the celebrated lady who wore rings on her fingers and bells on her toes. To consolate the picture, she carried over her head an expensive and expansive white lace parasol, whose carved ivory handle fluttered with white satin ribbons. When she appeared with these little additions to her toilet upon the favorite drives the Lenox cottagers did not hesitate to openly stare and comment, and girls in correct driving costumes who were going about in their own chapel carts would even go so far as to draw rein and stand still in the road as this queer figure went by. Her toilet on the drive, when she appeared in her own handsome, London-built equipage for an afternoon air, was equally peculiar. Her dress might be the most perfect creation of Parisian couturieres, and yet with it she would wear a large white knitted hood tied under her chin with a long pink ostrich feather thrust into its meshes, with the end waving in the wind. Some astonishing eccentricity of the sort made every costume noticeable and her appearance was always anticipated with interest, for it was known that she would not disappoint the public of some novelty impossible to forecast.

Her costumes, however were trifles compared with the anecdotes that were related at the Lenox dinner tables of her management of her household. She had a French chef, and was particular that he should always present for her inspection every day, whether she dined alone or not, a carefully thought out menu. If this met her views she signed her name at the bottom, and the dinner was served according to the programme, but if it did not appeal to her imagination she drew a crossmark down the list, and the whole dinner had to be composed again from the very beginning.

She always dined with a butler in evening dress to attendance and many lackeys in plush to aid him. Even if she sat down to the meal quite alone the whole place was lit with wax candles, the table loaded with flowers, and all the plush clad lackeys with knee-breeches and powdered hair ranged around the dining-room. Every time she passed to or from her carriage all the footmen were in attendance ranged along in a double row from the front door down to the carriage. They all came out and bowed solemnly as she passed between them until the last footman shut the door on the visit, and as soon as she was sighted turning the lackeys were summoned and she gained the threshold again between an avenue of plush coats and breeches. But the central figure of the Westinghouse household is the boy, George, who is about 8 years old. There is a daughter, too; but she does not seem to count for much, all the splendor of the household being lavished on the son and heir, who is, by the way, an Italian marquis, as well as the prospective owner of millions of money. The small marchese evidently finds the title such a bore and high sounding as much that he is only induced to wear it after 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

It came about this way. The Government of Italy was anxious to introduce the Westinghouse system of air brakes upon their railroads and sent for the inventor himself to come over and superintend the application of them. After his work was done in a manner highly satisfactory to every one, the King of Italy offered him a marquisate for his pains. The inventor had a level head and refused it for himself, but like all really good Americans he had a sneaking weakness for titles concealed somewhere about his person and couldn't quite make up his mind to put away the compact entirely, so he accepted the marquisate for his son, and little George is not only George Westinghouse Jr., heir to a dozen millions, but is also his excellenza il marchese di—something or other; the Italian word has slipped me. The inventor did not mean that his son should have only an empty and meaningless title, so he bought the ancient estates somewhere near Turin that used to belong to the di Somethings or Others and began to spend money on it.

The old mountain castle has been repaired and renovated, the gardens weeded and replanted with flowers, the fountains made to play again, the fields and vineyards fenced and cultivated, and the little stone cottages of the tenants rebuilt. So when the marchese comes of age he will find himself really an Italian marquis, with an estate and an ancestral home. Meanwhile he is only a marchese at intervals. He couldn't stand the burden of it all day. He did at first, but grew so thin and delicate keeping up the formalities that the physicians peremptorily decided that he must be simple George Westinghouse from 6 o'clock in the morning, but that after 5 o'clock in the afternoon he might be the marchese because as he went to bed at 8 there were only three waking hours of this oppressive dignity and it would be no strain to sleep as a marchese. All day, then, he plays about with his sister, and has a good time in the usual American fashion, but when 5 o'clock come he must wear black velvet and lace, speak only Italian, be addressed by all the servants as "eccelenza," and be constantly attended by an Italian nurse in national costume and a footman in livery. He usually goes to drive at this hour, and his equipage fills the other Lenox children with awe and admiration. It is a perfect English dog cart in miniature, drawn by a pair of snow white Angora goats, and has also a miniature groom to sit behind—a small boy in livery, with white breeches and top boots. This cavalcade drives about the Lenox roads, with a mounted groom of larger growth in attendance, and mammas have to hold tight to their offspring to keep them from falling out of their carriages in excitement and interest.

Well, all this kept Lenox agog last summer, but people only stared and talked. They never went near the eccentric lady, though there was a general report that she was a woman of much wit and brilliancy. This summer, however, Mrs. Fred Neilson arrived on the scene and gave a new turn to affairs. Mrs. Neilson is Freddie Gebhardt's sister, and nearly as individual and independent in her ways as Mrs. Westinghouse herself. Shortly after her appearance Mrs. Neilson announced that the stupid fashionable folk of Lenox bored her and that she meant to call on the inventor's wife, whom she declared she thought charmingly original. There was a great outcry at this, but taking with her Miss Jeanne Tournure, who lived next to Mrs. Westinghouse, and who is one of the best known figures in Lenox fashionable life, she made the threatened call. As they drove up Mrs. Westinghouse was just appearing in the doorway, while her victoria stood waiting. She waved it away when she saw the callers coming—both of whom she knew well by sight—and stood waiting for them on the porch. Mrs. Neilson, somewhat taken aback but determined to see the thing through, came up the

LEADER McBAIN'S CLASSICAL MUSIC.

An Unexpected Husband—The Railroad Rumorist on His Native Heath—He Talks.

This is told at the expense of the Fifth Regiment Band: When the Third Infantry Regiment went into camp at Ukiah that band went along to furnish the soulful strains by which the Indians in the reservation were to be charmed into peace and an outbreak prevented. If there is anything that Professor McBain prides himself on it is the fact that he has a band which can outplay any similar organization, not excepting the famous Marine Band, on the continent, and, of course, when turning out with a rival regiment the band played some of its most select and difficult tunes. On the way down Market street, from the armory to the ferries, at the head of the Third, the band fairly outdid itself, and on the way to Ukiah serenades were played from the selections of the most popular composers. In fact Leader McBain convinced the people that his band would take a back seat for no other.

Sunday morning on dress parade the music was admired by hundreds of Ukiah people, and was of the same high class order as on the preceding day. But not so with the tin soldiers. After the ceremony Adjutant Delany and Leader McBain had it out in this wise:

"Mac, that music is no good, can't you give us something better?" queried the adjutant.

"Why gracious alive, man," was the reply, "what do you want, Pertec, Sullivan, Verdi, Chopin, are they not good enough for you; those selections are the best in the world."

"Well," said the soldier man, "I suppose the stuff is good enough for refined society, but our boys won't stand it, we want something lively, can't you give us 'The Wearing of the Green'' or 'I Owe Ten Dollars to O'Grady'' or something like that?"

Of McBain it is said he doubled up with cramps at this announcement, but during the rest of the week plantation melodies, and "I Owe Ten Dollars to O'Grady" were all the rage, and Governor Waterman was received at camp to the tune of "Oh My, Ain't He a Daisy."

The camp is ended. Leader McBain is at home in a delirous condition suffering from an affection of the brain, and twenty other bandsmen are a raving horde of maniacs. It is not considered advisable to ask the musicians how they enjoyed their Ukiah trip.

It was at Santa Cruz. The time was during the Fifth Regiment Encampment. He belongs to Company A and wore two bars on his sleeves, and his name is Lawton. Among the other soldier boys he is known as the greatest lady's man extant. He had not been in the city by the seat twenty-four hours before he was noticed with a lady fair hanging to his off arm, whom he was showing about the camp. After that his presence in camp became less and less and his passes to return after lines were closed always read 2 A. M. He was often seen at the beach under a huge parasol, from under the edges of which were noticed the fluffy folds of a pink blazer. The other boys envied him and his officers ground their teeth at his continued absence from duty. He was almost worked up to that point when he thought he would ask her to write him often when he was gone when the explosion occurred. It did not come suddenly, but it got there with two feet. They were in their accustomed position on the beach one day and he was idly heaping up the sand and building up miniature forts the while, keeping up a running conversation about seaside nothings, when she chanced to remark that she was going to have an impromptu party at her house, "would he please come?"

Of course he would. He would be delighted to attend.

"Were any of her young lady friends to be present?"

"Yes, several of her old schoolmates would be there, and she would introduce him all around, and John would get in at 9 o'clock. Poor, dear John, he had to work so hard, but still he would like to meet Mr. Lawton, she was sure.

"What does John do?" queried the sympathetic Corporal. "Is he your brother?"

"Oh! no, ha! ha! John is my husband. He is a railroad brakeman and gets home every night at 9 o'clock."

Tableau.

Corporal Lawton acted as Corporal of the guard in camp during the next twenty-four hours.

The West Oakland dry goods box is a great institution. It is a more potent factor in the politics and general affairs of Oakland than the country store of '62, around which so many campaigns were fought and over which Washington and Richmond were captured, looted, and reduced to ashes many, many times. It was over the West Oakland dry goods box that the last campaign was settled, and Harrison owes his election solely to the existence of that same West Oakland dry goods box. Politics are dead, but do you suppose that the West Oakland dry goods box is out of a job? No, sir. The West Oakland dry goods box is in the heighth of its glory.

Over its rough and unplaned top the city of Oakland has been bonded dozens of times. Elections have been held and carried, sewers have been built, and the city generally improved.

But even the bonding of the city has grown old and worn. The election has been carried so many times that there is nothing new in it, and even the defeat of the measure, arranged for novelty, is becoming tiresome, and they have had to find something new. They are now deciding the future policy of the Southern Pacific Company in Oakland, and if Senator Stanford wishes any advice as to how to conduct his road it can be obtained very easily.

"There is no doubt of it whatever," says Peter J. Dailey. "The Southern Pacific Company are going to capture this city. They are going to own every franchise of any value in Oakland, just as they do in San Francisco. Look at that Market street road. They own that road, just as they will own every street road in Oakland."

And Mr. Dailey grows very mysterious.

"They own that Piedmont cable. The Southern Pacific Company ain't going to let a franchise like that get away from them, of course they own it," said Mr. Dailey when someone expressed doubt. "Why, that is evident on the face of it. All the Southern Pacific Company's laborers came over here and went to work on that," and Mr. Dailey smiled at this clinching argument.

"The Southern Pacific Company's foxy. They don't let everybody know what their about, but they ain't going to let this town get away from them. They own all of the Ridge franchises, and in a little while you will see some very important changes there. I ain't so sure but that they are back of that electric road to Berkeley."

"But," and Mr. Dailey imparted this secret very confidentially, "a man who lives at Tubbs' Hotel was telling his barber this morning that after the Southern Pacific Company got that cable road built down to First street on Broadway, they were going to abandon the Seventh street local, to almost entirely and only run hourly or two hourly trips during the day."

Mr. Dailey has one other cure up on the railroad question.

"Congress meets pretty soon and I see that Secretary Plumb of the Board of Trade is advocating the cession of Goat Island. The Southern Pacific Company always wanted that, and this is but a starter. They will soon that before long so that you will see that Congress takes that up at its next session. You will see if it don't. That would be a great thing for the company, and they are going to get it to complete their local system."

Walter F. Price is another railroad builder around the West Oakland dry goods box. He holds views similar to Mr. Dailey, though more elaborate.

"The Southern Pacific Company is going to get a hold of everything available in this town. They can't always run that Seventh street local as they do, and they will have to run trains on First street and along the western bay front. Then they are going to gridiron this town with a series of cable roads to feed these two roads. The cables running east and west are to feed the Berkeley trains, and the cables running north and south are to feed the First street road. They will have cables on Broadway, Grove, Market, Adeline, and Center street, and on Seventh, Twelfth, and other streets to feed the Berkeley. That is what they are up to. I don't know whether I care very much whether they carry it out so long as it is done."

And this merely shows that West Oakland is alive on the railroad question and the trend of public sentiment in that neighborhood.

But just wait until they get to electing a Governor down there.

Nova Scotia is remarkable for the number of its old people. It has a larger number of centenarians than any other country, there being one to every 19,000 inhabitants, while England has only one to every 200,000. They are chiefly of the farming class, in comfortable circumstances, accustomed to exercise in the open air, plain food, and plenty of it, with good inherited constitutions.

BLUE STEAM.

The Man Who Wanted to Get Out on the Prairie

WHEN THE BLUE STEAM WAS COMING

Had a Level Head—Causes of Boiler Explosions—The Recent Accident in West Oakland.

I have read with a great deal of interest the expert testimony given before the Coroner's jury on the recent explosion at Sixteenth street, Oakland, and must say that I am surprised that so many men professing to understand their business know so little of the cause of boiler explosions, and some of them are men who have handled steam for many years and are able to reassemble a re-mantled engine almost in the dark, and even build one from the raw material. Still should you ask one of these engineers what causes a boiler to explode they will avoid the question by informing you that it "sucks" be too much pressure, not enough water, a leak, or the pumping of cold water into the boiler, and many other theories, but as for getting a positive answer not one in one hundred will give it. And why? Simply because they don't know. Now one witness examined before that jury came pretty near telling the truth, for he, like any engineer, knows that what is commonly known as dry or blue steam is dangerous and stated that when he "found blue steam in his boiler cock he wanted to get out on the prairie," and so would I. Now let me tell you that cold water pumped into a boiler never caused an explosion—no amount of steam pressure ever caused an explosion. There are many other assigned reasons that have had to bear the responsibility for boiler explosions, and really had as little to do with them as an unborn child. Too great pressure will burst a boiler, strain her seams, and even tear them apart, but never explode her. Feed water never enters the boiler above the flues, but always below the water line, and is instantly amalgamated with the hot water in the boiler. This has a tendency to reduce the temperature and consequently to reduce the pressure. A leak tends also to reduce pressure. There are many causes for foaming. Some of them are grease—either animal or mineral. Some waters carry a considerable percentage of oils, and nearly all waters contain chemicals to a greater or less extent. A locomotive watered at two tanks fifty miles apart will sometimes unite waters that when subjected to heat will cut up all kinds of monkey shines, and foaming is often one of the results. Many railroads have been obliged to abandon expensive water stations on this account. Any engineer can tell you that the water in a boiler at work will shift from one end to the other, and that the gauge will show three cocks and a few seconds later barely one, and when a boiler is foaming cocks and glasses are next to useless. So much for the elements that do not cause explosions. And now for the one (for there is but one) that does.

A boiler may foam and deceive the engineer as to the amount of water in her, or a careless engineer may allow his water to run down too low, in either case the flues are uncovered. Now dry or blue steam (as it is called) is never generated by fire and water, but by fire on one side of flues or grates and steam on the other; and under these conditions the steam is rapidly converted into gas. This gas is what most people call dry or blue steam, and when heated to the proper degree is as explosive and as powerful as dynamite. But little is known of the constituents of this gas for the reason that it explodes on the instant the chemical combination is perfected, through the agency of heat applied as described. And a perfect analysis has never been obtained.

It is fair to presume that all regular engineers are careful of their own and and the lives of others, and that there are excellent reasons why the best engineer in the world should sometimes be deceived as to the amount of water in his boiler; also that naked plates with steam on one side and fire on the other will at once begin to generate an explosive gas, and when the gas is heated to a proper degree it will instantly explode; that as soon as the flues or plates are again covered with water the generation of gas ceases, and it is worked off with or reconverted into steam, and the danger averted. A foaming boiler will sometimes indicate a plenty of water, when if the consumption of steam is suddenly stopped and the fire drawn the water will fall far below the lower cock and show nothing but gas (blue steam), which, if the heating process had continued, would at the proper moment explode.

A certain amount of powder placed in the barrel of a gun with a bullet well pressed home will produce a certain effect, and harmless to the gun; but should the free exit of the bullet and gas be obstructed by a tompion or a little mud in the muzzle very serious results will follow, viz: the barrel will be bursted by the sudden pressure of the air confined in the barrel, between the bullet and the obstruction in the muzzle. The same result will follow should an air space be allowed to exist between the powder and the bullet by a failure to press the bullet well down on the powder. With our breech-loading arms and fixed ammunition this latter seldom happens, but barrels are frequently bursted by obstructions in the muzzle, and sometimes portions of cartridge shells are drawn up into the barrel and even this partial obstruction will cause a barrel to burst at the next fire. I have witnessed several cases of this kind in a long army experience and while this last illustration does not bear directly upon the subject in hand, I mention it simply to show what trivial and unthought of causes sometimes produce serious results. And to show that the poor D——l of an engineer who is so unfortunate as to incur an accident, is not, and cannot always be held responsible. J. F. M.,

VIRCHOW OR DARWIN

The Great German Sci-Says That the Proof of His Theory is Lacking.

London Jacket.

Some sensation has been caused at the recent Anthropological Congress in Vienna by the speech of the great Berlin biologist, Professor Virchow. About a year ago Virchow, on a similar occasion, made a severe attack on the Darwinian position, and this year he is similarly outspoken. We make the following extracts from his long address to the Congress:

"Twenty years ago, when we met at Innsbruck, it was precisely the moment when the Darwinian theory had made its first victorious mark throughout the world. My friend Vogt at once rushed into the ranks of the champions of this doctrine. We have since in vain sought for the intermediate stages, which, were supposed to connect man with the apes; the proto-man, the pavanthropos, is not yet discovered. For anthropological science the pavanthropos is not even a subject of discussion. The anthropologist may, perhaps, see him in a dream, but as soon as he awakes he cannot say that he has made any approach toward him. At that time in Insprnes the prospect was, apparently, that the course of descent from ape to man would be reconstruction all at once; but now we cannot even prove the descent of the separate races from one another. At this moment we are able to say that among the peoples of antiquity no single one was any nearer to the apes than we are. At this moment I can affirm that there is not upon earth any absolutely unknown race of men. The least known of all are the peoples of the central mountainous districts of the Malay peninsula, but otherwise we know the people of Terra del Fuego quite as well as the Eskimo, Bashkirs, Polynesians, and Lapps. Say, we know more of many of these races than we do of certain European tribes; I need only mention the Albanians. Every living race is still human; no single one has yet been found that we can designate as Simian or quasi-Simian. Even when in certain ones phenomena appear which are characteristic of the apes—e.g., the peculiar ape-like projections of the skull in certain races—still we cannot on that account alone say that these men are ape-like. As regards the Lake dwellings, I have been able to submit to comparative examination nearly every single skull that has been found. The result has been that we have certainly met with opposite characteristics among various races; but of all these there is not one that lies outside of the boundaries of our present population. I can thus be positively demonstrate that in the course of 5000 years no change of type worthy of mention has taken place. If you ask me whether the first man were white or black I can only say I don't know."

Professor Virchow summed up the question as to what anthropological science during the last forty years has gained, and whether, as many contend, it has gone forward or backward. "Twenty years ago the leaders of our science asserted that they knew many things which, as a matter of fact, they did not know. Nowadays we know what we know. I can only reckon up our account in so far as to say that we have made no debts; that is, we have made no loan from hypotheses; we are in no danger of seeing that which we know overturned in the course of the next moment. We have levelled the ground, so that the coming generation may make abundant use of the material at their disposition. As an attainable objective of the next twenty years, we must look to the anthropology of the European nationalities."

Tennyson.

Poet of passion pure and tempered strength,
Our England's pride in these historic days
Of fevered fancyings and of fretful lays;
We bless kind fate that may thee golden length
Of life and singing season, still sing on!
Thy manly music all our hearts can spare,
Fresh as the balmy breath of English air,
Rolling o'er gardens o'er the rose is gone,
And mellow as the duttings long or few
That haunt the laurels round an English lawn.
May rosy radiance as of summer dawn
Lighten the lingering eve whose footing slow
Softly approaches such a son of song.
So loyal and so reverent, so untainted,
As since spring first on English meadows blows
Largess of blossoms, scarce hath joined our throng
Of native minstrels. Live! our restless day
Beholds no brow so worthy of the bay!

The Spartan Virture of Fortitude

Must be possessed in no ordinary degree by those who bear the pangs of rheumatism without complaint. We have never heard of such an individual. But why not, ere the lifelong martyrdom begins, extinguish the germ of this atrocious malady with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the efficacy of which as a preventive of this disease, as well as a means of relieving it, is well established and amply attested during the last thirty-five years, over professional signatures? It expurgates from the blood those acrid principles which beget the pain and inflammation characteristic of this complaint, which, if should be neglected, is always liable to terminate life suddenly when it attacks a vital part. The Bitters also expels the virus of malady from the system, remedies dyspepsia, kidney complaint, constipation and biliousness, quiets the nerves, and invigorates the whole physical organism.

A FINANCIAL SUCCESS.

The Bazar of Days Raises the Money That Was Wanted.

The bazar of days closed last night at Cavalry Hall, and proved a brilliant as well as financial success. At 10 o'clock Dr. Horton stepped to the platform and briefly outlined the purposes of the bazar. He stated that Bethany Chapel, on Clay street, near Fifth, and toward the incumbrances on which the funds raised would be applied, was in debt to the amount of $1200. He made an earnest appeal to those present to make a determined effort to cancel the obligation, and stated that a lady had just informed him that she would donate $500 toward it. Several others at once signified their willingness to assist, and in a few moments $500 additional had been subscribed. This, with the $400 or $500 taken in at the booths, will liquidate the debt of the chapel and leave a handsome balance.

SIX MONTHS WORK

What the City Council has Done

SINCE THEY TOOK OFFICE IN APRIL.

A Review of Their Work by Secretary Plumb—Keeping Tally—A Very Fair Record.

EDITOR TRIBUNE: Citizens are not slow to criticize the Council for inaction, carelessness or faulty neglect. The eleven fellow citizens whom they have chosen to victimize by electing them as Councilmen are held answerable at once to a high standard of personal dignity, intellectual perception, business dispatch and official integrity.

The city press, a tolerably faithful mirror ever of popular judgment, is inclined to lend a criticising hand when opportunity offers by flaming headlines of "Talk-Talk" or dissertations, more or less merited, upon official manners and acumen. Just now there is a suspended criticism, as harsh as any which has yet found voice, because the Council has not taken efficient and decisive action upon some measure of sanitary improvement.

In the midst of this atmosphere—dense with anathemas hurled at the City Council—it occurs to me to suggest that the old maxim more sensible than elegant, "Give the devil his due," might be applied to even these under-paid and over-taxed public servants.

Let us briefly summarize the work which these eleven have done, and possibly there may be awakened a more just judgment as to what they have failed to do.

But first a word as to the "talk" in the Council chamber. It may be impolitic—it certainly is undignified—to consume much time in personalities, or to betray narrowness of spirit in public sessions of a legislative body. But it was one special ground of complaint against the previous Council that they settled most differences in "star chamber" session and before the public followed the lead of the leader, as if conclusions reached in private were not to be questioned in public.

I will not attempt to decide between the two methods. The one adopted by the present Council has had this good effect; it has shattered any idols that might have been reared in the Council chamber, and shown the people that election to the Council does not by magic endow an ordinary man with extraordinary capacity, does not strip off personal conceit, nor reanimate with a spirit of self sacrifice.

What has the Council done in return for the expression of confidence by their fellow citizens, and for the $10 per month they are permitted to draw from the city treasury? Six months have passed under the new charter. The Council has held thirty-six public sessions, or six per month. In addition, there have been probably half as many sessions of the Committee of the Whole, and I know not how many meetings of the several committees.

There has been a full attendance at eighteen, or just one half the public sessions. At nine meetings ten members were present. At five only nine, and at four meetings seven members. Councilman Towle has not been absent once. President Camron has been absent on one only, and was then called away by a funeral. Messrs. Evans, Hackett and Macdonald have been absent but once, Messrs. Brosnahan, Kirk and Wakefield three times, and Messrs. Collins, Earle and McAvoy six times.

This is a very fair record, and for eight of the Council extremely creditable. Five of the members have made an almost unprecedented record for attendance.

Not less than seventy-five reports from committees have been made, showing considerable work outside the public meetings. Many of these have embraced several topics.

One hundred and five reports from public officers have been received and acted upon.

Petitions, protests and similar communications to the number of nearly 200 have been received and considered.

The resolutions passed, number 480, a large proportion relating to street work, requiring careful investigation and discrimination. Forty-four ordinances have been introduced and twenty-two have been enacted.

There have been some ten or twelve full hearings to citizens upon important questions, involving public interests or private rights. These have necessarily consumed much time.

The proposals for street work considered, the applications for licenses, approval of bonds and auditing of bills have not been enumerated.

Surely this is not an insignificant record of the regular rush of a new Council, under an untried charter, and with a variety of complications. All these formulated items of business have not sprung up spontaneously, each and all have required careful and often long continued labor.

Take the ordinances. Some one has to draft them. If prepared outside they are found so faulty as to require multitudinous amendment. I have seen the mutilated condition of such copies. Two of the ordinances relate to the liquor traffic. The public very well know that a decision was not easily reached. One citizen only offered an ordinance in full. The members of the Council had earnest work in completing a satisfactory one.

Two other ordinances relate to street work, embodying general specifications of vast value to the city. I chance to know how difficult was the preparation of these and how little assistance the Council had.

The question may be asked, how far does the selection of a City Council relieve all other electors of responsibility in civic affairs? Or how absolutely does it impose all obligations as to the city's welfare upon the chosen few?

Citizens are free to petition the Council, and the records show they have not been slow to exercise the privilege. How many have proffered their assistance in public affairs? How much aid or counsel have they had from less occupied, more wealthy, older, and abler men whose interest in the city is greater? What lawyer has said to any Councilman, "Command my advice at any time?"

Have we not as electors left these our fellow citizens too much alone? Have we stood close at hand ready with encouragemnt, suggestion or assistance? And how much better would we have done in the same position? Are we quite sure our action would have been always high toned, self poised, public spirited? Have we quite subdued our own personalities, so as to be insensible to opposition, criticism and abuse? Do we never grow heated, or speak hastily?

Finally—Are we not as intelligent electors slowly but surely learning that those whom we choose to legislate in our behalf can do no better than to exercise the judgment and capacity with which they are endowed?

We therefore conclude that it is wise to select each representative not for availability or to pay a party debt, but by reason of the actual and proved possession of intelligence, sound judgment and sterling integrity. Why ever elect to official position men we would not employ for a trusted service in our business?

Very respectfully,

C. M. PLUMB,
Secretary Board of Trade.

The special train which this commandery has secured will consist of one baggage car, four Pullman sleepers of the latest design, and one Burlington dining car, with a full corps of trained cooks and waiters. The train, in all its appointments, will be one of the most comfortable and pleasant in its arrangements that has ever left the mole.

The officers of the Central Pacific, Union Pacific, Burlington and Pennsylvania roads have done everything in their power to contribute to the success and comfort of the excursion, and are entitled to the sincere thanks of all who go on this train.

The command goes by way of Salt Lake, stopping over there a few hours, by Denver, stopping there a few hours, thence over the B. and M., C. B. and Q. railroad to Chicago, stopping over 24 hours, where all anticipate a most delightful reunion with their friends of the Chicago city commanderies, leaving Chicago Saturday evening by the Pennsylvania Central via Pittsburg and Johnstown region and Harrisburg, arriving at Washington early Monday morning, the 7th prox.

The time schedule has been arranged so that they pass through all the portions of the route affording fine scenery in the daytime.

Necrology.

The body of Columbus Sparhawk was received in Oakland yesterday from Church, a little village near Syracuse, N. Y., and will be interred in Mountain View Cemetery tomorrow. The wife and family of Mr. Sparhawk came to California several months ago and he was preparing to join them when his death occurred.

John Feely, the 8 days old infant of Cornuck and Mary Feely, died yesterday at the family residence, 660 Harrison street. The interment will take place tomorrow in St. Mary's Cemetery.

The death of Edward Garnier, aged 35 years, occurred at the Greystone House yesterday. He came from Canada three months ago to engage in mining. Deceased leaves a wife, and the funeral will take place on Monday.

John Quincy Adams, the old gentleman who was buried at the county's expense on Wednesday, was a character well known all over the State. At one time he was a searcher of records, and was afterward employed by the "tax title sharks" to examine titles and serve notices of purchase for them all over the State. Heavy drinking caused his downfall and death.

HER HONEYMOON.

The Terrible Experience of a Child Wife.

RETURNS TO HER MOTHER A WRECK.

John H. Church Sues Out a Writ of Habeas Corpus to Secure Possession of His Sick Bride.

The troubles of John H. Church, the capitalist, in the matrimonial line, never seem to cease. Only a month ago he ventured on the sea of matrimony for the fourth time, and now he is again in trouble, and this time he finds the strong arm of the law gathering him into camp. It is only a few months ago that Church succeeded in securing a divorce from his third wife, Nettie J. Church, and it is said that he paid her $50,000 to call it quits between them. The career of this man, who is reputed to be worth $250,000, is none to his credit, and is marked with exciting escapades and riotous living. When Mr. Church found himself freed from the galling bonds which bound him to Nettie J. Church he looked around for another wife. This time he concluded that he would secure a young wife, who was not familiar with the wicked ways of the world, and in Catherina Pico, a young and innocent child, he found such a person, one who suited his taste. According to the story of Mrs. J. D. Todd, the mother of the child, Church laid siege to the young lady's heart. She informed the much married capitalist that he could never marry her daughter, and also that the child is only 15 years of age. But Church had captured many hearts, and he was not to be foiled. He induced the child to come to this city and procured a marriage license and they were married the same afternoon. When Mrs. Todd returned to her home that day her daughter was missing, and she soon learned that Church had made her his bride. The mother was frantic, and she instituted a search for her child, but found her not. Then Jose Ramon Pico came out with a card, denying that his daughter had married John H. Church. But he was mistaken, for when he signed that card his daughter was the wife of Church. Pico's wife secured a divorce from him, and obtained the custody of the minor child, Catherine. She resumed her former name of Mrs. Todd. After a search of two weeks Mrs. Todd found her daughter, and induced her to return home. It was not the same beautiful, innocent Catherine that had run away a few weeks before. What an awful change had taken place! The child wife was broken down in health and was suffering from St. Vitus dance superinduced by the treatment she had received. It is related that the first night of her honeymoon was one of debauchery. So incensed was the mother that she called upon District Attorney Reed a few days ago and told in substance the facts as above given, and demanded a warrant, which was given, for the arrest of Church on a charge of perjury for swearing to an affidavit that his wife is 18 years of age. Church, however, was not going to part with his child wife without a struggle, so he visited her home, and in the absence of her mother, again induced the girl to join him. A second time Mrs. Todd went in search of her wrecked daughter, and when she found her the child wife was only too glad to return home. She was sick and sad; a total wreck of her former self. In the meantime the warrant for perjury had not been served upon Church. Yesterday he determined that he would secure his wife, if possible, so he swore out a writ of habeas corpus in the Superior Court, asserting that the child was illegally restrained of her liberty by her mother. The matter was set for hearing before Judge Levy today and the question of Church's right to hold the child will be determined. Mrs. Church is in delicate health. It will be a long time, if ever, before she recovers from the effects of her terrible treatment.

THE MARCH OF PROGRESS.

An Institution of Interest to Oaklanders.

It is at all times the duty of a reputable newspaper to inform its readers of all things within its knowledge that may be interesting and useful to them. In pursuance of this policy the following facts are given to the reading public in the hope that they will receive due consideration: The New England Tea Company is established at 470 Tenth street, this city, and this fact is of vital interest to all families, restaurants and hotels. They have in stock all the best brands of teas on the market, and these they are prepared to sell at wholesale prices in lots from five pounds and upward. Of course, as their establishment is extensive, floating a large capital in the trade, they can handle the best brands of teas and coffees at the lowest possible margin of profit. Their prices are below those of other tea stores all along the line, and yet, with every five pounds of tea purchased they give a present of eleven pounds of best loaf sugar; with every one pound of tea they give TWO pounds of loaf sugar.

The members of the firm are all expert judges of teas and coffees, and by their fair and honorable dealings they have created an immense trade. They are not connected with any other tea company in Oakland, but devote all their time and energies to their own constantly increasing trade.

A Rare Opportunity.

A few persons can secure reduced rates to Santa Cruz, October 9th, if they desire to accompany the Young Men's Christian Association, who go to that place to hold their Ninth Annual State Convention. The local association are entitled to a certain number, but the members not using all the tickets other parties will be accommodated. The round trip will cost but $2.50 and tickets will be good from Oct. 9th to 16th. Further particulars can be learned at the association 565 Broadway.

TAFT & PENNOYER'S, 1163 and 1165 Broadway, stock of silks, dress goods and cloaks is larger and more choice than ever.

THE BOULTER-DIXON WEDDING TODAY

The Lotus Club Entertainment—Other Pleasant Evenings—Personals and Other Gossip.

A new feature among social organizations has appeared, which seems quite sensible, and will, no doubt, lead to good results. As a rule, social clubs never attempt to educate more than the needs of society. It was left for the Lotus Club of Oakland to incorporate in the social creed of its organization a literary society. The Lotus Club is a representative company of social people, and the move will be watched with interest. C. Wiggins of the Bancroft Company of San Francisco, a member of the club who is well posted in parliamentary ethics, will be present at the commencement and will take an active part in the promotion of the success of this department. In connection with this the club will be qualified, in the near future to give dramatic and musical entertainments for the aid of charity organizations.

Hallowe'en will soon be here, and with it comes the usual appropriate festivities. Our Favorite Social Club, which has kept up the custom of meeting at this time every year for three years, will give a social at Masonic Hall, West Oakland, on that night—October 31st.

The Elites will be out again with a grand prize masquerade ball Tuesday evening, October 29th, at Cavalry Hall.

A full dress reception will be held at Mrs. Lawson's, 1705 Madison street, next Monday night for the benefit of the kindergarten.

Vocal and instrumental music was discoursed until 12 o'clock, when a bounteous repast was served to all the guests. After doing justice to all the delicacies dancing was indulged in to the sweet strains of El Modello's strings. President J. F. Kenney of Y. M. I. No. 8 officiated as toast master. Professor T. Social Lemon Drops.

The Elite Social Club gave a pleasant party last Tuesday night at Cavalry Hall. Two handsome prizes were given away to the lucky lady and gentleman who came nearest in guessing the correct number of lemon drops in a large glass jar which was on exhibition in the dance hall. Tickets were punched and distributed to each person who obtained admittance, upon which the owner wrote his or her name and with quaking fingers ventured at the numbers in that jar. Dancing was begun at the usual time and continued until quite late. At 10 o'clock the jar was opened and the lemon drops counted by a committee consisting of the following gentlemen: George Clift, William Curnow, Bert Morgan, and J. J. Nagle. In the grand march the tickets were collected and the names and guesses copied upon a large card arranged for that purpose, so that a complete register was obtained. Some of the ventures were timid and could not get up courage enough to make the jar hold more than 100 drops, but others tried to fill a whole tub. The nearest guess was that of J. D. Bartolome, who thought there were 275. Miss Vera Schirm was the nearest correct of the young ladies—256. The correct number, as counted by the committee, was 250. The prizes, which consisted of a gentleman's and a lady's watch dressing case, were then presented to the lucky persons. This party was one of the most successful ever given by the Elites. And that is saying much, for it is one of the foremost social clubs of the city.

Pierce, Mrs. Gilson, Miss Horton, Mrs. Martin, Miss Fletcher, Mrs. Dr. Burritt.

Young Christians.

An entertainment was given last night at the Congregational Church by members of Christian Endeavor societies from the various churches of the city. As there were similar attractions at other places, the attendance was not so large as was expected, although the chapel was well filled. The musical and literary features of the evening were excellent. The programme opened by the rendering of "Oberlander," Gungl, by a string quartet, consisting of the following: Alexander Stuart, Rev. John Rea, Mrs. Rea, and Herbert Kellogg. A recitation by Harry Culmes followed, which was well received. George Martin rendered a guitar solo, "Mocking Bird," with a skill that appealed directly to the musical bumps of the audience, and was encored. The string quartet again appeared and rendered this: A—"Minuet," Mozart; B—"Evening Song." Miss Maud Des Rochers sang "Flow, Gentle Stream" in a very acceptable manner. Harry Chalmers recited a very apt selection, and the music ended with the playing of some popular selection by the string quartet.

Miss Sadie Hardy then read from a diary containing notes which she had jotted down during each day of her attendance at the convention of the Christian Endeavor societies in Philadelphia. Miss Hardy was an efficient representative, and in her report enumerated the events of importance as they occurred. While there she heard a new version on of Paul's statement that women should be silent in the churches was in course of translation. The word was sadly mistreated and warped. Originally it meant: "Don't let your women fa-la-la in the churches; don't let them quibble and quarrel."

Order Sons of St. George.

Derby Lodge of Alameda gave a very pleasant stag party last Wednesday, and their hall on Park street, Alameda, was crowded with men of English birth or parentage. F. W. Spiars of Fruit Vale and Oakland presided in his usual agreeable manner, and C. T. Johns made a very eloquent and forcible speech on the advantages to be gained by becoming a member of the order, and several of those present announced their intention of joining Derby Lodge.

Albion Lodge of Oakland has been very successful during the last three months, having initiated thirteen new members and received applications for membership from eight other gentlemen. The total membership is now 118, and the funds in hands of treasurer and in bank exceed $1000.

The District Committee of San Francisco and Alameda counties will hold its regular monthly meeting on next Wednesday evening at 1020 Broadway.

A Pleasant Time.

Last night a merry company spent a few hours at the home of Miss Cora Swails, in East Oakland. Games, songs, and music of various kinds filled out the entertainment of the evening. Pleasanter times are rare. Essay, "Gladstone, Nineteenth Century"
.....F. H. Maas

The subject for the next meeting, October 31, 1889, was decided on to be a trip around the world, the society to charter a steamer and officers, crew and passengers, to consist of members of the society, and that letters were to be written to different ones on the different countries passed through on their travels. A log book will also be kept of incidents on board the steamer. The officers of the above society consist of L. L. Wirt President, and Miss A. Brown Secretary.

The Pleasure Seekers.

The grand ball of the Lotus Club took place last night at Cavalry Hall. There was a fair attendance, and the dancers enjoyed themselves to their hearts' content. The hall was tastefully decorated. A sparkling refreshments were served in an adjoining room by the following ladies: Mrs. Kittie Doyle, Mrs. T. J. Crowley, Mrs. E. M. Kister, and Miss Florence M. Duffie.

The Reception Committee consisted of Miss Alice Clark, Miss Kittie O'Brien, Miss Lulu Glover, Miss D. Revalk, and Miss Emma Glover.

The following committees had charge of the dances, and aided its success: Floor manager, J. Bloom; Floor Committee—W. N. Wetmore, W. Watkins, Charles M. Wiggin, H. Tisdale, William L. Clarke.

The following, including those outside of the club, were present:

W. Harry Campbell, President; Louis A. La mont, Vice President; Miss Carrie Bloom, Secretary; Miss Abbie Mee, Treasurer; J. Bloom, Sergeant at Arms; Miss Annie Mee, Miss Lena Revalk, Miss Emma Burns, Miss A. Theibault, Miss Alice Clarke, Miss Emma Glover, Miss Lou Glover, Miss Lena Glover, Miss Sophia Rathjen, Miss Kittie O'Brien, Mrs. E. M. Kister, Mrs. T. J. Crowley, James Hall, W. F. Hamelton-berg, F. E. Patrick, S. K. Hammer, W. F. Hesse, George Olsen, T. J. Crowley, E. M. Kister, C. Wiggin, W. N. Wetmore, W. J. Clarke, H. J. Tisdale, W. Watkins, H. Watkins, Will Watkins, Kittie Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Patrick Jr., Claud E. Davis, Jas. E. Hughes, F. E. Patrick, Tacoma, W. F. Call Gage, Charles Coffee, R. Maxwell, John R. Hunter.

A Reception to Dr. Dille.

The young people of the First Methodist Church tendered their pastor, Rev. J. R. Dille, a reception last night at the parlors of the church. The young people thus expressed their gladness at the continued presence of their pastor and friendly worker, who was always present and interested in their societies, socials and company. The evening was devoted to talks, singing, etc. Dr. Dille made a very pleasing address, in which he expressed his warmth toward the young people and encouraged sociability.

The Dairymaids.

Another pleasant and profitable evening has been marked among the many that have brightened the career of the Little Baptist Church on Twenty-first street. Last night a social and literary entertainment was provided, which was quite excellent in its way, and the large audience that thronged the church testified to its merits by frequent and hearty applause.

The feature of the evening was the forming of a Dairymaids' Union, which was represented by fourteen young ladies and gentlemen. This union was composed of women as well as men. They met in mock array on the pretty platform in the rear of the church and proceeded with business. The "Old Lady" acted as President of the meeting, kept the youngsters in order, and read the proposed constitution, which contained many simple, astonishing, but conclusive articles. It provided that "every member must be a same person; that no member should marry outside the union." This article was stricken out. Meetings shall be held whenever it was convenient, two members constituting a quorum. The constitution was adopted in due form and caused much merriment. The "Old Lady" then called upon various members of the union, who promptly responded with appropriate selections, as follows:

A guitar trio, which was well received, by Paul Pelton. Alf Dutton and Bert Burrill. Miss Mary Doyle sang a solo, "A Dairymaid am I." "An Experience of Names' was sung by Miss Mamie Haynes. A quartette composed of Alf Dutton, Bert Burrill, Paul Pelton and Ed Sherman rendered "Meet Me by the Moonlight." The can can was sung by the following young ladies who were dressed to represent milk cans, and Alf Dutton (pump), and Paul Pelton (chalk). The duet "When Bound, Fair Maiden" was nicely sung by Miss Mabel Caswell and Bert Burrill. Mr. Flitther rendered an organ solo, and the programme was closed with a drill by the milkstool company. The company was dressed in a fanciful dairy costume with plush colored milk stools, and went through a complete military drill.

The following are the members of the union: Hissie Doyl, "Old Lady;" Paul Pelton, Alf Dutton, Bert Borrill, Johnnie Schueller, Bert Fox, Ed Sherman, Florie Capp, Bessie York, Stell Cooledge, Mae Doyl, Mabel Caswell, Mollie Wieder, Mamie Havens.

The ladies in charge were: Mrs. Isaacell, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Burrill and Miss Pearl Pelton.

POSSIBLE JOHNSTOWNS.

Cities and Towns in Scotland Which May Be Wiped Out by Flood.

London Cipher.

Considering what a wide spread shock was caused by the catastrophe at Johnstown, it is not at all pleasant to find, from a recently printed Parliamentary paper, that a considerable part of Scotland is exposed every hour of each succeeding working day to a calamity which would be so terrible in its results that the official who foretells its possible occurrence declares that it is impossible even to imagine what the consequences might be. Running across Scotland from the southwest to northeast is a waterway known as the Caledonian Canal, formed by linking together a series of locks, and remaining in its course an exceptional number. Now, the state of the cast-iron gates of these locks is in many cases so bad that the Superintendent of the canal, who was commissioned to report specially upon them, declares emphatically that a serious danger exists, so long as the lock-gates remain in their present condition, of a most terrible accident. But one must quote in his own simple and unexaggerated words. "Past experience has taught us," he writes, "that a cast-iron gate cannot stand against the slightest touch of the iron stem of one of the heavy steamers which now pass through the canal. Accidents have happened, and must again will happen again, owing to a mistaken signal or the failure of an engine to reverse; and the results would be most disastrous."

Then he goes on to give an example of what might occur. "I will instance," he says, "the case of a steamer striking one of the locks gates at Cullochy. This would immediately let down upon the valley of the canal, to Fort Augustus, the whole surface of Loch Oich, about two square miles, with a depth of eighteen to twenty feet. Nor would this be all. Loch Lochy, with about ten square miles of superficial area and a depth of eight to twelve feet, would follow, and what the consequence might be it is impossible even to imagine. A similar accident occurring at Dochgarroch might bring down upon the town of Inverness upward of twenty five square miles of water of depth of from seventeen to twenty feet." Now I have no wish whatever to be an alarmist, but I think that such statements ought to be widely published without delay. So plain, in fact, are the assertions made by John G. Davidson, the superintendent of the canal, that they need no comment from me. But some Scotch member of Parliament should call immediate attention to a warning which has already been lying unheeded on the table of the House of Commons for some live weeks.

steps, and Mrs. Westinghouse advanced to meet her, saying, suavely:

"I am very glad to see you. Will you kindly tell me who you are?"

"I am Mrs. Neilson—Mrs. Fred Neilson—and I've come to call," explained the now thoroughly embarrassed lady, who had come somewhat as she would to a menagerie to stare at an unusually wild beast, but suddenly found that the fun was not all on one side.

"Oh! then you are very kind, I am sure. And who are you?" replied Mrs. Westinghouse, turning to Miss Tournure, whom she had seen every day that summer.

"I am Miss Tournure—Jeanne Tournure"—stammered the other.

"And do you live in Lenox?" inquired Mrs. Westinghouse, blandly, which so completely finished the two that they remained only a few moments and retired in disorder. The story went all over the place, and so amused every one that within a week the whole of fashionable Lenox had called to see what Mrs. Westinghouse would say to them. Each came back with some similar story, and she promptly became the rage of the moment. The lady was in no hurry to return these visits, most of them were allowed to remain unpaid for three or four weeks, but people found her so individual and so amusing when she did come that they were satisfied to let her do as she liked, and so at last the Westinghouses, with eccentricities, and all, are fairly launched into society, and in the course of a decade or so will be quite as exclusive as any of their fair antagonists.

She Has Disappeared.

The summer girl in beauty's pride
No longer climbs the mountain side.

In rural lanes or meadows green
No more she beautifies the scene.

Her crimson parasol no more
In search beside the ocean's shore.

The russet shoes are put away,
The dress of tulle and ribbons gay.

Vacation past, her triumphs o'er,
She is the summer girl no more.

In apron white and cap of lace,
She now the restaurant doth grace

And one may easily hear her there
Shout "Ham and eggs, chops, roast beef, pie!" —Boston Courier.

A Man From Siskiyou.

New York Sun.

Some of the most daring young masters the East ever produced have gone West and developed into the most successful men of business on the other side of the Sierras. A case in point is John B. Eldredge, a brown-bearded and keen-eyed Californian, who is now visiting his native State and the city all New Yorkers are so proud of, after an adventurous and wealth-gaining career in the Rockies. Contrary to the general experience, however, Mr. Eldredge's most blood-curdling adventures were met with before he ever crossed the Empire State's boundaries, save on a taut wire stretched above Niagara Falls and on the back of the world-famous Blondin. Eldredge was the slender, bright eyed lad whom Blondin used to carry over the falls on the "tight rope." The boy—he isn't fifty yet—was much less worked up by these aerial flights than was the great performer himself. Eldredge has made his pile in California and has seen the world. He wouldn't make one of those trips on Blondin's shoulders now for all the gold he has piled up in the Sierras. Mr. Eldredge's drift mines in Siskiyou county, Cal., are among the richest in the West.

COMMON SENSE IN DIET.

You May Survive Youthful Gorging But Beware in Your Old Age.

There is in human nature infinite diversity of power and endurance in the general and nervous energy and in digestion and assimilation, and a man of high-strung nervous temperament hearing a temperance orator describing the effects of alcohol might cap it all by similar effects of tea, "the cup that cheers and not inebriates." Even the faculty seldom appears to recognize the injurious results of this refreshing beverage. The poet Cowper seems to have been its slave and victim. Coleridge abused its use and took to laudanum. The "English Opium-eater" well describes its bad results. The Chinese as a nation are tea-drinkers and addicted to the other subtle drug. The alternation of excitement and depression in the votaries of tea is evidence of its unsuitability for many people as a stimulant. Melancholia and religious mania are often to be traced to its habitual use, says the Quarterly. The question of the use of any kind of food, stimulating or otherwise, is entirely personal. To say that because one man is injured by excess another man should perfectly abstain is most absurd. Probably more men are injured by excessive eating than by excess in alcohol; and are we therefore bound, for the encouragement and aid of those who need convers on from excess, to cease to eat at all of things well flavored? To say that those who are not injured should abstain is but to make a law without the due preamble. Men vary, not from one another only but they differ from themselves in different circumstances and at different periods of life. There is no absolute rule respecting any food or drink for all men, one man is not to be controlled by other men in his entirely and strictly personal affairs, but each man is to be "fully persuaded in his own mind." Each mind, however, should be open to persuasion, and persuasion in the question of habitual food should be distinctly of an experimental sort. Each man is provided with intelligence for his own preservation; but the pity is that men neglect this precious gift of individual mind in their peculiar concerns. They do as others do. They eat and drink with freedom while they are so young and active that the system overcomes the injurious attack, but as men advance a little further into life and are not quite so agile, then begin the troubles that tea, coffee, alcohol, and many kinds of even simple food and stimulants and condiments inflict upon the careless and the inconsiderate, as well as on the intemperate and immoderate consumer. Each man should discover for himself what and how much and when to eat and drink at several periods and in the varied conditions of his life; his organism must be recognized by its possessor as a healthy, lifelong study and a happy care.

STARTLING EVIDENCE

Of the Cure of Skin Diseases when all Other Methods Fail.

Psoriasis 5 years, covering face, head, and entire body with white scales. Skin red, itchy, and bleeding. Hair all gone. Spent hundreds of dollars. Pronounced incurable. Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

My disease (psoriasis) first broke out on my left cheek, spreading across my nose, and almost covering my face. It ran into my eyes, and the physician was afraid I would lose my eyesight altogether. It spread all over my head, and my hair all fell out, until I was entirely bald-headed; it then broke out on my arms and shoulders, until my arms were just one sore. It covered my entire body my face, head, and shoulders being the worst. The white scales fell constantly from my head, shoulders, and arms; the skin would thicken and be red and very itchy, and would crack and bleed if scratched. After spending many hundreds of dollars, I was pronounced incurable. I heard of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and after using two bottles CUTICURA RESOLVENT, I could see a change; and after I had taken four bottles, I was almost cured; and when I had used six bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT and one box of CUTICURA, and one cake of CUTICURA SOAP, I was cured of the dreadful disease from which I had suffered for five years. I thought the disease would leave a very deep scar, but the CUTICURA REMEDIES cured without any scars. I cannot express with a pen what I suffered before using the CUTICURA REMEDIES. They saved my life, and I feel it my duty to recommend them. My hair is restored as good as ever, and sound my eyesight. I know a number of different persons who have used the CUTICURA REMEDIES and all have received great benefit from their use.

A Very Serious Charge.

The charge of blackmail, or an attempt at blackmail, made by Talleisin Evans against Secretary Pope of the Federated Trades, is a very serious matter, and it will not do to pass it over in silence. The federation of which Mr. Pope is an officer must take notice of the charge, and if on investigation it is found not sustained it will be in order to give the grounds for such conclusion the same publicity as was given to the charge. It is a matter of serious discredit to an organization to allow one of its officers to rest supinely under the stigma of such a charge. The federation has, of course, no sympathy with the methods which Mr. Evans charges that Mr. Pope used, for the very obvious reason, if for no other, that the object of those methods was the use of the machinery of the organization for the private profit of Mr. Pope. We do not say that he is guilty, but if he cannot very clearly exculpate himself his resignation should be demanded.

A Queer Divine.

The Rev. Justin Felton of Brooklyn, N. Y., is not exactly the proudest product of American civilization. He will perhaps be remembered as the protagonist of a crazy crusade against Catholicism conducted on indecent lines. In fact, a book he wrote on the subject was so offensive that the women who were employed as compositors on the matter refused to continue the work after one chapter. The reverend gentleman is now in England, and Americans can scarcely point with pride to his behavior. He addressed a meeting at Brighton recently at which the Rev. J. G. Gregory, the Episcopal rector of a leading church, presided. The Bishop of Chichester next wrote to Mr. Gregory a letter in which he said among other things:

> At a public meeting in the Dome on August 16th, you being in the chair, Dr. Felton, whom you introduced, is reported to have said, that the Virgin Mary was not much of a virgin.' This provoked laughter! On reading this profane utterance I was shocked, but I hoped that the lecturer might have been misunderstood or misrepresented. But at a meeting at Fishergate on August 21st Dr. Felton admitted the accuracy of the report of his address as to this particular point, and proceeded to justify it by a process of illustration even worse than the original statement.

The Bishop then proceeded to read Mr. Gregory a very sharp and well merited rebuke for permitting a fundamental doctrine of his church to be questioned without a protest at a meeting where he presided.

Mr. Felton should be called in. He is a disgrace to American civilization.

Looking Forward.

General Montgomery Meigs in an article published in Science makes a remarkable prophecy concerning the probable growth of population in the United States in the next hundred years. Arguing from the fact that the population of the country has, on the average, increased a fraction more than one third in every decade, he concludes that it is safe to allow a growth of one third in every decade of the next century. Estimating the probable population at the time of the taking of the census next year at 67,240,000, by adding one third every ten years he gets those astounding figures:

1890	67,240,000	1940	594,763,827
1900	89,653,333	1950	792,951,769
1910	119,537,777	1960	1,057,269,026
1920	159,383,037	1970	1,409,692,034
1930	212,377,777	1980	1,879,589,378
1940	283,837,037

Of course the figures are ridiculous. Population in a thickly settled country does not increase in anything like the same ratio as in a thinly peopled region of large resources. On this estimate the United States would in a hundred years have a larger population to the square mile than England has now. Mr. Gladstone has ventured an estimate on the same subject, and he places the total population of the United States in 1990 at 700,000,000. These figures are probably still too high, but supposing there are 500,000,000 gathered within these confines at the end of one hundred years from now, what tremendous problems of government will necessarily arise in the efforts to harmonize the interests of so many myriads.

Concerning Printing the News.

The Santa Barbara Independent is wroth because of the habit—which itself consistently avoids—which some newspapers have of printing the news and urges in its amusing way:

> What good can be this eternal record of crimes and of casualties? They serve only to debase the reader, to offer to his mind a tremendous phantasmagoria (sic) of blood-blinded eyes of brutal strength brutally applied, of so-called justice flinging to the scaffold an occasional victim as a sort of expiation for the crimes and murders and worse than murders in which an innocent people sometimes ride, "red trail-shod," as Burns says. The soft impossible opinions of Bellamy are not enough to stem this bloody tide.
> We do not, we confess, quite understand all of this, but as we recognize the mission of the newspaper to do good by presenting a picture of the world as wholly pure and sinless, we hope the press will proceed to shut its "blood-blinded eyes" and present a picture of things as they ought to be, but are not. By and by when the historian, who is the newspaperman of a past age, comes to recognize his real mission to reform by suppression of the truth we shall find Henry VIII depictured as a lamb of God; Benedict Arnold will be whitewashed; Jefferson Davis presented as the savior of his country; Barnley was not murdered but only wafted on the wings of a barrel of gunpowder to a state of bliss; Jesse Pomeroy merely desired that victims might be goods a little sooner and Dennis Kearney was a fine old Irish gentleman.
> In the mean time it is a wicked world, but as the newspapers did not have the making of it they are not altogether responsible. No doubt the editor of the Santa Barbara Independent could have improved on the plan of creation, and even at this late date we rejoice to receive his assurance that all that is needed to reform it now is a daily coat of whitewash and a certificate of good moral character.

We should rejoice to see Brother Gibson elected to be Chief Magistrate of this glorious commonwealth, or to be Representative in Congress or Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, because there is nothing too good for him, bless his honest old heart. His homely sense and humor, carrying a certain flavor of old Abe Lincoln, have endeared him to us all, but before he takes any irrevocable step he should reflect on the fate of him who spent last summer rainbow chasing.

The National Malady in America.

Memphis Appeal-Avalanche.

> With a country unequaled in its variety of food products, we eat worse food than any other people, and reap the heaviest harvest of dyspepsia. Instead of elevating the cuisine to the position of a fine art, as the French do, we relegate it to ignorant and slovenly servants. We will pay a man $30 a month to drive a delivery wagon, and then cry out against the extravagance of the citizen who gives a cook $30 a month to preserve the digestion of himself and family. We are practical in everything and pre-eminent in regard to sweetness, but have no cooks because we consider them no better than the chambermaids who sweep the doors and carry out slops. If does not pay to be extraordinary even in this respect.

Where It Is Strong.

New York Tribune.

> Says an infelicitous Democratic editorial paragraph, keep out of the way of the Democratic party; it is unlikely strong in its own behalf." So is the other ass.

How the Editor Got Home.

Texas Siftings.

> San Francisco is 3,000 miles from New York by rail. If walked it seems to be 2,999,960 miles.

Not Mrs. F. E. Gibson.

EDITOR TRIBUNE: The rescue of the little daughter of Mr. Doyle as described yesterday in your interesting columns, and copied therefrom into various Oakland and San Francisco papers, was indeed an act of heroism.

The press gives me the credit of this courageous and humane deed. It is a credit undeserved, for allow me to say that I am not the one to whom the honor belongs for saving the child's life. MRS. F. E. GIBSON.

Oakland, September 28, 1889.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES.

Election of Officers—The Quarterly Meeting.

The Board of Directors of the Associated Charities met last evening at the rooms of the society, 1068 Broadway, and organized by electing Dr. J. K. McLean, President; Dr. H. D. Lathrop, Vice President, Rev. C. W. Wendte, Corresponding Secretary; A. J. Ralston, Recording Secretary; and Colonel W. H. O'Brien, Treasurer.

The general management of the work of the society is conducted by the Central Council, which is composed of the directors of the society, representatives of the various affiliating charitable societies and officers of the city and county government, which holds its regular quarterly meeting October 14th next.

Tickets of reference to be handed to the applicant at the houses of residents, can be obtained by applying at the secretary, 1068 Broadway, room 2.

Young Men's Christian Association.

The 3 o'clock meeting tomorrow afternoon at the Young Men's Christian Association will be one of unusual interest. It will begin with a gospel song service of fifteen minutes. The Association male choir will render gospel selections during the meeting. Mr. Ayres, the quartet singer, will sing a solo, and the members of the orchestra will perform their part. The address to young men will be given by Judge E. M. Gibson of this city, who is a favorite speaker at the Association.

Failures of the Week.

The Bradstreet Mercantile Agency reports seven failures in the Pacific coast states and Territories for the week ending yesterday, as compared with seven for the previous week, and eleven for the corresponding week of 1888.

The failures for the past week are divided among the trades as follows: Two saloons, one fruits, one painter, one wholesale books, one dry goods, and one grocer.

THE UNIVERSITY.

How Boys Are Amusing Themselves and Settling Down.

Knight, '88, visited Berkeley yesterday.

Davis, '90, returned yesterday from Marysville.

The Occident will appear next Friday, October 4th.

Both classes are enthusiastically in favor of football as a substitute for the rush. The time for the game has not been set.

The number of lockers in the basement of North Hall are wholly insufficient. Many of the students have to "double up" in order to find accommodation.

A tennis club, limited to fifty male students, is being formed in the college. Nearly the requisite number of names have been subscribed. Two courts will be erected on the enclosure of the cinder path. Tennis promises to be one of the recognized athletic features of the U. C., and a tournament on Field Day is already spoken of.

The exuberant spirits of sophomores and freshmen seem bound to find vent in some manner, and as the rush is under bar no other means appears than for the members of both classes resident in Berkeley to patrol the streets at night and fall upon each other in numerous friendly scrimmages. Thus, Thursday night, both classes were out in force, and the occasion was the topic of general conversation between the two lower classes, either claiming the other was worsted. As the students from the city alighted from the train at Berkeley yesterday, the first thing greeting their eyes was a huge '92 upon a large signboard recently erected and hitherto awaiting the artist's brush. This was an eyesore to '92, but they patiently abided their time, till last evening they succeeded in obliterating the obnoxious sign, though not without having to overcome a spirited resistance by the freshies.

WINTER TROUBLE

That is Predicted for the Central Pacific Railroad.

The Burned Snow Sheds in the Sierra Nevada Mountains—Personal Notes From the Pier.

The Southern Pacific Company has decided that it is too late in the season and that they will not rebuild the snow sheds that have been burned by the fires at Cascade and in the neighborhood of the Summit. It is getting cold in the mountains and somewhat frosty and snow can be expected almost at any time, and the men do not like to work out, and so the half mile or more of burnt snow sheds will not be rebuilt. This is causing much dissatisfaction among the engineers running over the mountains, for they have grave fears of snow blockades. The company, however, will depend on the snow plows to do the work required. Or even the snow plows do not satisfy the engineers, and they look forward to the coming winter with foreboding. For the past three years there has been little or no snow on the Sierra Nevada mountains, and the engineers predict big kades all over the road this fall, and particularly at the Cascade bridge, which they say is the worst spot on the road for snow.

READLIGHT FLASHES.

Archie Lester has returned from Vacaville.

W. W. Slater is having a little office built on the pier.

Conductor Sam Bones will go East with the Knights Templar on Sunday.

The hull of the old steamer Capital has been sold to Whitelaw. She is now being cut off the piers.

George Carroll, master mechanic of the Tucson division of the Southern Pacific Railroad, who has been visiting in this city, returned to Tucson on Monday.

Pullman conductors now run through from Oakland to Portland on the Oregon Express. Heretofore they have run as far as Marysville and as far south as Ashland.

A few days ago two monkeys were found on one of the ferry boats, evidently a mother and her little one. They were adopted by Auditor Clerk Palmer for the time being.

A deed has been recorded in Contra Costa County from Jose Garcia Luis and wife to John W. Smith of California and Nevada (narrow-gauge) Railroad, part of the Ward and Smith Lease of the Rancho El Sobrante, containing eighty acres, consideration, $400.

A Newspaper Directory.

N. W. Ayer & Son's "American Newspaper Annual" for 1889 contains a carefully prepared list of all newspapers and periodicals in the United States and Canada, arranged by States and towns in alphabetical order. It enumerates the various press and editorial associations throughout the United States and Canada, together with lists of their officers. One of its chief features is a carefully prepared description of every county in the United States, setting forth its location, area, adjoining navigable streams, the character of its surface, the nature of its soil, its leading crops and manufactures, its county seat and population. A similar, but more elaborate, descriptive heading is appended to each State, Territory, and Canadian province. The county headings also show, from the United States census of 1880, the number of manufacturing establishments of all kinds at that time, the amount of capital invested in them, the number of hands employed in them, and the value of annual products. The State headings show, in addition to the summary of the foregoing, the amount paid in wages and the value of the raw material used.

He Saved My Life.

Some 18 months ago my health began to fail until I was confined to my bed. Some of the best medical skill of San Francisco treated me for chronic ailment of the liver. I failed so rapidly that my relations were summoned to my bedside. When in that condition, and through the influence of Captain Fleche, a family of Oakland, Doctor Buell of that city was telegraphed for, and the result was most favorable, as the Doctor diagnosed my case as chronic enlargement of the stomach. Without asking any questions he gave me a perfect history of my disease from the beginning down to that date, June 18, 1889. The treatment was begun and felt a great change inside of six hours. The second day I sat up, and inside of a week I resumed my work as head sweeper for Gillman & Danforth's Coffee House. I am now enjoying splendid health.

The Safest

AND most powerful alterative is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young and old are alike benefited by its use. For the eruptive diseases peculiar to children nothing else is so effective as this medicine, while its agreeable flavor makes it easy to administer.

"My little boy had large erysipelatous ulcers on his neck and throat, from which he suffered terribly. Two physicians attended him, but he grew continually worse under their care, and everybody expected he would die. I had heard of the remarkable cures effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and decided to have my boy try it. Shortly after he began to take this medicine, the ulcers commenced healing, and, after using several bottles, he was entirely cured. He is now as healthy and strong as any boy of his age."—William P. Dougherty, Hampden, Va.

"In May last, my youngest child, fourteen months old, began to have sores gather on its head and body. We applied various simple remedies without avail. The sores increased in number and discharged copiously. A physician was called, but the sores continued to multiply until in a few months they nearly covered the child's head and body. At last we began the use of Ayer Sarsaparilla. In a few days a marked change for the better was manifest. The sores assumed a more healthy condition, the discharges were gradually diminished, and finally ceased altogether. The child is livelier, its skin is fresher, and its appetite better than we have observed for months."—Frank M. Griffin, Long Point, Texas.

"The formula of Ayer's Sarsaparilla presents, for chronic diseases of a most very kind, the best remedy known to the medical world."—D. M. Wilson, M. D., Wiggs, Arkansas.

Trains Collide at Palatine Bridge.

Several Crowded Passenger Coaches Telescoped.

Many Killed, Others Fatally Injured.

Narrow Escape of Prominent Railroad Officials.

Special to The Oakland Tribune by Western Associated Press.

NEW YORK, September 28.—The following particulars of the railroad disaster at Palatine Bridge last night have been received by the New York Central officials:

The engine of the first section of the train broke its cylinder head and stopped.

It was composed of one baggage car, three coaches, one sleeper, and the "Big Four" road and Michigan Central private cars. The second section, composed of one baggage car and six sleepers, ran into the first section.

The Michigan Central private car had the rear end broken. In this car was the President of the Michigan Central H. B. Ledyard. He escaped unhurt.

President M. E. Ingalls of the "Big Four" road was in a private car in the third from the rear. He escaped unhurt, but Mrs. Ingalls received slight injuries.

The porter of the car which Mr. and Mrs. Ingalls occupied was killed.

Four persons in the Buffalo sleeper were killed.

Up to the present time the names have not been received here.

A LOW LEVY.

Ninety-one Cents for Current Expenses of the City.

The City Council Adopts the Recommendation of Auditor Snook—The Apportionment.

A special meeting of the City Council was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

All the members were present except Messrs. Hackett and Collins.

An ordinance fixing the tax levy at 91 cents for general purposes and 5 cents for redemption and interest, was read. The ordinance presented is as follows:

Water fund	05
Street Light fund	10

Mr. Evans moved to amend by reducing the levy for the School Fund from 16 cents to 8 cents. He said that teachers should not be paid more than half salary during vacations. He also said that the school Department has no authority to pay salaries to departmental mechanics and draughtsmen.

No second to the motion.

Mr. Evans moved to reduce the levy for street lighting from 10 cents to 8 cents.

STARVATION.

The Cause of Death of the Late Frederick Thompson.

Frederick Thompson, who died at the Willson House, actually starved to death. An autopsy conducted yesterday by Dr. Russell, assisted by Drs. Pinkerton, Wheeler, Augur and Southard, discovered a cancer in the oesophagus. This cancer prevented the patient from taking nourishment, and the cause of death, therefore, was starvation, in complication with the cancer.

DISMISSED.

John H. Church Fails to Coerce His Wife.

JUDGE LEVY DISMISSES THE WRIT.

Church Arrested on a Charge of Perjury by Constable Kesler Brough Here.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 28.—John H. Church appeared before Judge Levy this morning to prosecute his endeavor to compel his child wife to return to him.

The young wife was surrounded by her mother and several lady friends who watched the husband closely as it was expected he would make an attempt to get possession of his wife by force if the legal process failed. While in court Church gazed at the young woman continually, but it was evident that his glances were received with no favor.

John F. Burris, the attorney for Church, stated that Mrs. Church has been suffering from St. Vitus dance, and that he has physicians present to prove that the condition of her mind was such that she was not competent to testify as to the facts of the case.

Judge Levy replied that he wanted to hear what the wife had to say, and that the only question before the court was whether or not she was restrained of her liberty and had left her husband voluntarily.

Mrs. Church was sworn and was evidently greatly excited and very nervous. In answer to the court's questions she said that she will be 19 years of age on October 1, and that she was married to Church about a month ago in East Oakland. The marriage license was procured in Oakland at about 2:30 P. M. Church had invited her to go and see his house in Fruit Vale.

"If they ask you how old you are, you say 18," said Church to her when he applied for the license. The clerk asked him the age of his intended wife. He swore that she was 18, and he gave her such a look that she feared to contradict him. She lived with him for two weeks and then became so ill through his abuse and brutal conduct that he sent her to Dr. Archer's place in Monterey county. Her sister took her from there.

"Do you want to remain with your mother?" asked Judge Levy.

"Yes, sir. I want to be with my mother, and I am not restrained of my liberty. I don't want to go back to my husband," replied the unfortunate young woman, emphasizing every word.

When Burris became convinced that he had made out no case, he said that it was not for the best interest of Mrs. Church to remain with her mother. He desired the court to make an order to send her to school or leave her into custody of a third party, where his client would pay all her expenses and molest or annoy her.

"I am not going to make an order to send a married woman to school," interrupted Judge Levy, "and I have no power to compel a woman to live with her husband. If she has deserted him he has his redress in a divorce suit. I am satisfied the woman is not restrained of her liberty, and the writ is dismissed."

Mrs. Todd, the mother of the child wife, who had been absent from the courtroom, then entered, and when she was informed that her daughter could remain with her she shook her fist at the man who coerced the girl into a marriage. Church was in no hurry to leave the courtroom, but was evidently waiting for his wife to go first. Finally he left, but he was barely outside the portals of justice when the strong arm of the law seized him in the person of Constable Kesler of Oakland, who placed him under arrest on a charge of perjury. The warrant was sworn to before Judge Smith in Oakland by Mrs. Todd, and the perjury consists in his swearing to the age of his wife as 18, when she was only 15.

Church is over 50 years of age, and was bedecked with diamonds. He quietly submitted to the arrest and immediately left with the constable for Oakland.

Christian Endeavor.

A paper social was given at the parlors of the East Oakland Presbyterian Church last evening by the social committee of the Y. P. S. C. E. Refreshments were served on paper dishes, and passed around in paper baskets. A pleasing programme was also presented which was well applauded. The chapel was neatly decorated with evergreens and flowers, and together with a number of paper decorations made a pleasing sight.

Improving.

Sam Radcliffe, the East Oakland hack man, who was run over by a buggy and badly injured while trying to hold a lady's horse, is somewhat improved today. Fortunately no bones were broken and the unfortunate man expects to be out again in a few days.

Hit With a Brick.

James Jones, a hod carrier, was this afternoon struck on the head with a brick which fell from the second story of a building on which he was working. A deep scalp wound was dressed at the Receiving Hospital.

Adopted His Neice.

George E. McHale this morning adopted his 10 months old neice Agnes Myers. The mother of the child is dead, and the father, Edgar Myers, consented to the adoption.

Will Count Ties.

William H. C. Brotherton of Santa Monica proposes to start from this city on March 1st on a wheelbarrow expedition to New York, going by way of Chicago and following the railroad track the whole way.

KIMBERLY

Tendered a Great Ovation at Honolulu.

A Sacramento Man Sentenced to Death in Honolulu.

The Governor of Kansas Is Seriously Ill.

Private Dalzell Replies Sharply to Tanner.

Special to The Tribune by the Western Associated Press.

ADMIRAL KIMBERLY.

An Ovation Tendered to Him in Honolulu.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 28.—The steamer Alameda from Sydney and Auckland via Samoa and Honolulu, arrived here at noon today. Admiral L. A. Kimberly and staff, who have been at Apia for six months left there on the Alameda and stopped at Honolulu. The Admiral was given an ovation at Honolulu, the British man-of-war Caroline, and the Japanese man-of-war stationed there, firing salutes upon his arrival. He will remain at Honolulu a short time, and continue his journey to San Francisco on the United States man-of war Nipsic. The repairs on the Nipsic have been almost completed, and she is expected to sail about October 1st.

PRIVATE DALZELL.

He Replies to Tanner's Charge of Betrayed Confidence.

PITTSBURG, September 28.—Private Dalzell gives to the press a letter which he has written to Corporal Tanner in reply to the telegram from the latter asking him if his (Tanner's) letter was stolen from Dalzell and made public. Dalzell's reply was very caustic. He says he himself published it for his own vindication, and says Tanner's letter cannot injure an honest man and adds: "With the question of veracity it raises between Sherman, Taylor, Parson and others I have no further concern except to offer to publish their letters to me. You have my sincere sympathy, and your enemies my bitter curses. I have risked much to vindicate you, even the wrath and curses of many of our leading Republican journals."

"You have more than repaid my services and sacrifices by exposing to public contempt the intriguers who, by treachery and falsehood betrayed us both, and with us the entire comradeship who raised them from the dunghill to the throne of power."

The Sweetest and Best.

Wheelock Pianos, for sweetness of tone, touch, even scale, durability and general fine workmanship cannot be surpassed. This is an old fashioned edge fact, to which the hundreds of customers who use them will testify. They are bought and recommended by most of the leading musicians, conveners, schools and seminaries. While reliable pianos of high grade cannot be sold as cheap as many inferior grades are sold, yet Mr. Girard, who is the sole manufacturer's agent on the coast, sells them at a reasonable price. What makes pianos so low? It's the sub-agents' and middlemen's commission. Mr. Girard's canvasser will save middlemen's commissions, who canvass from house to house bothering people day and night, representing all kinds of pianos, and induce them to take one of their pianos. Mr. Girard employs no canvassers. Those who wish to buy a reliable instrument and save middlemen's commissions will do well to examine the large stock of pianos and organs and all kinds of musical instruments at F. B. Girard's music store, 1159 Broadway, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, who sells pianos on easy monthly payments and warrants every instrument he sells.

The Grand.

The Grand is an appropriate name given to the palace of refreshments on the corner of Twelfth and Webster sts. The interior decorations and fixtures far surpass any other establishment of its kind in Oakland; the walls are beautifully covered with heavy paper of rich colors and studded with handsome pictures, while gilt moulded panels add greatly to its appearance, and it is finished by a border of party colors in the late art of Pa Crista.

All sporting matters of importance such as pugilistic attractions, races, etc., are announced on the bulletin of this house after each round and every heat by the Pacific Postal Telegraph.

The stock of imported beverages and cigars is superb, making it a most enjoyable resort for gentlemen after business hours; everything is conducted in a first class manner under its present proprietor.

The Grand is located on the corner of Twelfth and Webster streets, and Mr. B. H. Farmer is the popular proprietor.

A Beautiful Picture Free.

THE METHODS OF PRESERVING FRUIT.

Refrigeration Does Not Pay—Uniformity of Temperature—The Age of a Horse.

A PROFITABLE TREE.

Four years ago N. B. S. Coleman planted the seed of an acacia or the gum bearing species. It is a small shrub or tree with abruptly bipinnate leaves, yellow flowers, and a smooth gray bark. When the tree was only 1 year old it produced one pound of the best gum arabic. At 2 years of age the product amounted to three pounds, at 3 years to six pounds and this year eight pounds were collected. The wholesale price of gum arabic is about $1 a pound. It will thus be seen that the cultivation of the "Acacia Vera" could be made a very profitable business.—Prison Talk.

THE AGE OF A HORSE.

The foal is born with twelve grinders. When four front teeth have made their appearance the colt is twelve days old, and when the next four assert themselves its age will be about twenty-eight days. The corner teeth make their appearance when the foal is eight months old, and the latter attain the hight of the front teeth at the age of a year. The two-year old has the kernel—the dark substance in the middle of the tooth's crown—ground out of all the front teeth. In the third year the middle front teeth are shifted, and when three years old these are substituted by the permanent or horse teeth, which are larger and more yellow than their predecessors. The next four teeth are shifted in the fourth year, and the corner teeth in the fifth, giving place to the permanent nipper.

At five years of age a horse has forty teeth, of which twenty four are grinders, far back in the jaw, with which we have little to do. For be it remembered, horses invariably have tusks, which mares rarely do. Before the age of six is arrived at the tusk is full grown and has a slight groove on its internal surface which generally disappears with age, the tusk itself becoming more rounded and blunt, and at six the kernel or mark is worn out of the middle front teeth. There will still be a difference of color in the center of the tooth.

The tusks have now attained their full growth, being nearly or quite an inch in length, convex without, concave within, tending to a point and the extremity somewhat curved. Now, or perhaps some months before, the horse may be said to have a perfect mouth.

At seven years the mark, as described, is very nearly worn out of the two center nippers and fast wearing away in the corner teeth especially in mares; but the black mark still remains in the center of the teeth, and is not completely filled until the animal is eight years old. As he gets on past seven the middle teeth begin to wear away.

At eight the kernel has entirely disappeared from all the lower nippers and begins to decrease in the middle nippers. It is now said to be "just mark of mouth." There are indications, however, after this age which will enable a very shrewd observer to guess very closely at a horse's age, but none that can be relied upon by observers. As horses become advanced in years the gums shrink away and the teeth exhibit a long and narrow appearance; they lean more forward and assume an arched shape.

CALIFORNIA FIGS.

As in other lines, California growers are gradually improving the quality of the pack of California figs. The fig industry in this State is in its infancy and it will take time and experience to develop it. Some few growers have made a study of the fig and the process of curing and cooking and have attained thus far considerable success.

Last season two or three packers sold their crop side by side with the imported at as good and in one case better prices than the Smyrna fig. This may sound strange, but the book of one of our fancy grocery houses will furnish the proof if required. The section in which the figs are grown has as much to do with the quality as the variety, but the method of treatment and handling has still more to do with producing a good merchantable fig.—California Fruit Grower.

TO PRESERVE FRUIT.

The greatest advantage to the fruit-grower, says the Rural New Yorker, will result from checking to early maturity, and preventing early decay after harvesting. This success demands a place for storage with surroundings favorable for preservation. One condition is conceded to all—that the temperature must be lower than that required for growth. That 32 degrees is too low seems to be the conclusion of those best qualified to judge. Fruit kept long at that temperature, although apparently unchanged, when removed soon sinks to decay, not apparently from overripeness, but from the permanent suspension of all living forces. The process of decay, not that of ripening, takes possession. California shippers of oranges have come to the conclusion that refrigerator cars do not pay; in fact, that they have occasioned great loss. It seems that the conditions most favorable for the preservation of fruit without loss in quality would be secured by a storeroom having the temperature so low as to check, not wholly destroy, the forces at work in fruit, whether these forces be chemical or organic—so low that spores could not be active; the air so damp that moisture would not escape, while the temperature and moisture should remain uniform. Apples, as well as potatoes, buried in the ground and so covered as to be protected from heat and frost, come out in the spring as fresh and bright as when buried in the fall.

Grapes, pickled and willed, then buried in stone jars three to four feet below the surface, will come out with stems green and fruit plump and bright. In these two cases the temperature is more uniform than could result with atmospheric exposure. Cellars having springs in them or streams passing through them are noted for keeping apples and vegetables fresh, even until late the next season. The water acts as a regulator of both temperature and moisture. These methods of storage approach the conditions specified above, and the nearer the approach the better the result.

If these conditions are favorable for the preservation of fruit in all stages of ripeness, the question arises: How may they be the best and most economically secured? The creameries and milkrooms now in use in the Western States present the most satisfactory solution of the problem, as in them the above conditions are economically realized in their most perfect form. These rooms are inclosed on the top, bottom, and sides with four dead air spaces, with double doors for entrance, and they are made as nearly air tight as possible. Fresh air is supplied at the bottom through a subterranean passage about twelve rods long and eight to ten feet below the surface of the earth. The passage is two feet wide and one foot high, formed of stone work. Through it a constant current of air is passing into the room. The temperature of this air is controlled and regulated by that of the earth at the depth of the passage. Moisture is deposited if the temperature is increased, so as to give nearly a uniform amount in the room.

Professor Arnold is authority for saying that while the extremes of heat and cold in those States vary from 110 degrees above to 40 degrees below, these rooms will not vary in temperature over five degrees during the year, uniformity remaining near 50 degrees. The air is pure, and the room is perfect as a milk-room. Ventilation is perfect, with uniform temperature and moisture.

Such a building need not be expensive. It can be built of coarse lumber, the air spaces sheeted with building paper, while the stone passage can be put down from five to eight dollars per rod, depending on the hardness of the soil and the proximity of stone. We have no knowledge that any such appliance has been used for keeping fruits and vegetables, but it seems to present just the conditions necessary for retaining every valuable quality in fruits and in vegetables, and for checking decay.

PRICES OF GRAPES.

As the vintage season is at hand, the prices that will be paid for grapes are gradually being established. Beringer Brothers are offering eight dollars per ton for Missions and Malvasias, and they propose to pay as much for other varieties as was paid last year, or as much more as other grape-growers may choose to pay. They want 2000 tons of grapes. Other parties in the vicinity of St. Helena were offering up to $12 per ton for best varieties at the close of last week.

At Napa, where prices range a little lower than they do further up the valley, because wine-makers there travel the State over for cheap grapes, which are purchased and brought to that city, the Register says that Zinfandel, Chasselas and other first class wine grapes will probably bring from $10 to $11 per ton.

These prices are all too low for a good profit to the grower, but they are surely higher than was expected would be paid. On the other hand, who will say the prices are not all that winemakers in general should pay, considering the present depressed condition of the wine market?

There is another matter in connection with the sale of grapes this vintage that was not at first expected, and it is that the demand for good grapes in the valley is more lively than it was last year. The crop of first class grapes is not very large, and this fact is better known to winemakers than to growers in general.

The present outlook for men who have good grapes to sell is so much better than was expected a few weeks ago that they must, as a natural consequence, feel greatly encouraged.—Calistogian.

Owing to his great popularity it has been proposed that the San Pablo Cable Cars be stopped for five minutes each way at the corner of Thirty-ninth and San Pablo avenue, where J. B. Mr. Baxter has gained all his fame by selling nothing but the very best of meats in the market at the very lowest prices.

The Oakland Gas Company Gets the Contract.

THE BOND PROPOSITION DISCUSSED.

But, as Usual, Nothing is Done—An Apparent Division of Sentiment—Minor Matters.

Contracts and bids were the two subjects that bothered the City Council last night when they gathered together with all members present save Mr. Collins.

A few liquor license applications were considered, and the bonds of the following liquor license applicants were approved. Franz Harding Vincent Hourat, Rohrback & Smith Jagels & Wulff, E. Le Fort, Herhas & Cardoza, and A. Olander.

The matter of the extension of the time for the dredging of the slips at the City wharf, which occupied all of the last meeting, was quickly disposed of.

Mr. Wakefield moved the reconsideration of the resolution that was introduced at the last meeting. He said that while the technical law might be against the extension of time, the equity was certainly in favor of the extension.

Mr. McAvoy opposed this, on the grounds that the company had not used due diligence or the proper implements.

Mr. Hackett raised the point of order that this could only be considered at a regular meeting. Ruled out by the President.

Mr. Burral made a few remarks, in which he said that the company was willing to pay the city for any damages occurring because of the delay.

W. R. Davis wanted to know if the Council wanted to hear anything more on the "alleged law" presented at the last meeting.

They did not, and the resolution was adopted, Messrs. McAvoy, Hackett and Brosnahan voting against it.

The bids for lighting the city were opened. There were two of them, and the space of time will be from October 1, 1889, to July 1, 1890.

The Oakland Electric Light and Motor Company propose to furnish, place, and erect fifty Brush arc lights of 2000 candle power each, to be lighted upon what is known as the moonlight schedule, for the price of forty-seven and one-half (47½) cents each for each night in the year. Said fifty lights to be placed as follows:

On Seventh street at Wood, Center, Adeline, Market, and Oak, at Clinton station, Brooklyn station, Twenty-third avenue station. On Broadway at First, Third, Fifth, Seventh, Ninth, Eleventh, and Fourteenth. On Washington at Sixth, Eighth Tenth, and Twelfth. At Clay and Fourteenth. On Franklin at Second, Fourth, Sixth, Eighth, Tenth, and Thirteenth or narrow gauge station. On Webster at First, Fifth, Seventh, Ninth, and Twelfth. On San Pablo avenue at Seventeenth, Grove, Twenty-second, Isabel a and Market; at Telegraph avenue and Broadway; Broadway and Twentieth streets, at Broadway and Franklin street, Broadway and Webster; at Twenty-sixth and West streets; Jefferson square, Harrison square, Madison square, Lincoln square, Tenth and Eleventh, Alice and Harrison, East Oakland square, Thirteenth avenue and East Twelfth street, middle of Eighth street bridge, middle of Twelfth street bridge, and such other electric lights as the Council may, in its discretion, designate, the same to be contiguous, however, to the system of wires and poles conveying the electric current to the above mentioned locations. Thirty-two of the lights above mentioned to replace the electric lights now furnished to the city, and to be lighted within twelve days from the date of the awarding of the contract, and the balance of eighteen lights to be lighted within thirty days from the date of awarding the contract, this time being necessary for the erection of the poles and wires. All cost and charges of every kind and nature for the installation and maintenance of the lights to be borne by the company. Accompanied by a certified check for $500.

The Oakland, Gas, Light, and Heat Company proposed to light the streets and public buildings of the city of Oakland from October 1, 1889, to June 30, 1890, by a combination of gas and electricity, and as an entirety, under the third subdivision to the notice to bidders.

For the gas lamps now in use, and as present located, to be lighted according to the moonlight schedule, 40 cents per lamp per night each, and for the electric lamps now in use, and as at present located, 33 cents per lamp per night each, until 12 p. m. each and every night, and for public buildings will furnish gas at the rate of $2 per thousand cubic feet, meter measurement, or electric lights at the rate of $10 per lamp per month each, to burn each and every night until 12 P. M.

Each gas lamp to be 16 and each electric lamp to be 2000 candle power.

All gas and electric lamps to be erected at the expense of the Oakland Gas, Light and Heat Company, and maintained in good repair and condition, free of expense to the city, any removals of gas and electric lamps from present position or positions hereafter ordered to be paid for by the city.

This proposal is made as an entirety for all lighting under said third subdivision, and is not a separate proposal for either gas or electricity it being, however, understood that all gas lamps within the effective illumination of electric lights, bid for under this proposal, shall not be lighted before 12 o'clock P. M. on nights that gas lamps are to be lighted, the deduction to the city for such number of hours to be in the proportion of the time to be paid for said gas lamps under the moonlight schedule; the number of gas lamps which shall not be lighted to be fixed by the City Council.

The term moonlight schedule used in this proposal is understood to mean that the lamps shall be lighted one-half hour after the sun sets and one hour before the sun rises and one hour after the moon rises, no lamps to be lighted on the night of full moon, the night before or the night after.

The Committee on Street Lights made no recommendation. Mr. Wakefield moved that the bid of the Oakland Gas, Light and Heat Company be accepted. Mr. Evans offered an amendment that the lighting of the city with electricity, as far as electricity is now used, be given to the Oakland Electric Light and Motor Company. This was lost and the original motion was adopted.

After many weary attempts the bond proposition was reached. President Camron called Mr. Wakefield to the chair and took the floor in support of his bond ordinance.

Mr. Camron told of the various vicissitudes of the bond ordinance, and then said he did not view with enthusiasm the report of the City Engineer and his assistant on the bond proposition, and he did not believe that the people would vote for it with such figures staring them in the face.

The figures, he said, were too high, and he referred to them as imaginary figures. He quoted a San Francisco firm as saying that the estimate of $134,000 for street sprinkling could be discounted by $76,000 and yet have money made on it, and if the other estimates were as high in proportion something should be done. The estimates were probably in proportion to the charge of the Engineer, $25 per day. A resolution was then offered authorizing the President of the Council to immediately procure plans and specifications from some competent engineer, such as would put the Council in possession of the exact figures, said plans to cover the work specified in the report of the Conference Committee, the cost of necessary repairs to the Main Lake sewer, cost of a Main Creek sewer, constructed of sewer pipe, and cost of suitable drainage of West Oakland marsh and filling such portions of same as are below low tide level.

The cost, Mr. Camron said, would be from $150 to $200, and he mentioned W. F. Boardman as a good engineer.

Mr. Evans said that he had no confidence in Mr. Boardman's ideas.

Captain Hackett wanted a Board of Engineers appointed, and did not want this matter gone about in a patchwork way, as was generally done. To carry out the West Oakland marsh scheme, would cost $1,000,000, and would bury the city in debt.

After discussion the resolution was laid over.

A resolution fixing the salaries of firemen as follows was brought up: First Assistant Engineer, $125 per month; Second Assistant Engineer, $100 per month. Engineers of steam fire engines, $100 each per month, the same to be permanent officers who shall devote their entire time, to the exclusion of other business engagements, to the duties of their offices.

After some discussion on dividing the question it was adopted.

Captain Hackett moved Mr. Wakefield of running around and trying to get a bill of $300 for the California Bridge Co. audited. Mr. McAvoy withdrew his name from the bill, on the grounds that he did no know what he was signing when he signed that. President Camron signed it and it was passed.

Then they adjourned.

Feminine Poker Players.

Washington Herald.

Speaking of Mme. De Struve having been fond of poker, some of the very best players of this fascinating game in Washington are women. They play for bonbons, gloves, etc., but oftenest for cash. The games are, as a rule, for a small limit, but they get as much enjoyment out of them as if thousands changed hands. The wife of one of the senators was much worried because her husband lost so much at poker, and determined that if he must play and must lose he should play with her and she would benefit by his losing. She learned the game thoroughly, surrounded the table with good players, and a handsome lot in the northwestern part of town is the result of her venture, and she is still winning, probably playing with an idea of putting a house on her lot.

AN INCONSISTENT ADVERTISER

He Sends All the Way to Connecticut for a Wife.

Sacramento Bee.

M. Leak, the glove man, was married several weeks ago, the young lady being a resident of Connecticut who came out on the overland train for the wedding. Leak expected to meet her on the arrival of the train at Sacramento, but through some misunderstanding missed her, and spent what was to have been his bridal night in telegraphing over the country to ascertain her whereabouts. The good natured chaffing which he had to stand from his friends in consequence of the mishap was, perhaps, easier to bear than the storm of indignation with which they one and all greeted the announcement that the young lady was from Connecticut and had been imported expressly for the occasion. "Why," they said, "your are spoiling every building and fence in the State with insanity recommendations to the public to 'Patronize Home Industry — Buy Leak's Gloves and give the California Boys and Girls a Chance to Make Them;' but instead of helping the California girls yourself when there is an opening in your family you send to the Eastern sea-board."

The joke has become so widespread and Leak so thoroughly broken in, that now when he meets an acquaintance the conversation is about as follows:

Friend (cordially)—"Hello, Leak. See you got married."

Leak (suspiciously)—"Yes."

Friend—"Congratulate you. Anyone I know?"

Leak (more hopefully)—"No, you never met her."

Friend (interest awakened)—"No! where is she from?"

Leak (the game up and facing the music)—"She's a charming girl from Connecticut."

Friend (in mild deprecation)—"Ah, but come now Leak, but why not give the California girls a chance? You know you advertise——"

Leak (resignedly)—"Come along what'll you have?" and they stroll into the nearest "Push" together.

State Horticulturists.

At the meeting of the State Horticultural Society yesterday the following officers were nominated and will be elected at the next meeting: For President, E. W. Hilgard; Vice-President, A. T. Hatch; Secretary, E. J. Wickson; Treasurer, R. J. Trumbull; Board of Directors, W. C. Blackwood, I. A. Wilcox, S. J. Stabler and Leonard Coates.

EUGENE HILGARD.

Professor Hilgard on the Death of His Son.

A New York dispatch to the Chronicle contains an interview with Professor Hilgard concerning the death of his only son. Professor Hilgard said: "Eugene was very ambitious in his classes in the University, and through excessive study, probably several years ago, weakened his eyes. He was a member of the class of '87, but had to drop out, and kept dragging along until I saw that it was necessary to give him a change of climate and rest, so I arranged that he should visit relatives in Berlin and Heidelberg.

"He went by the Canadian Pacific, and when he arrived at Victoria there was a delay in making connections which gave an opportunity to fish, and he, in company with several others, fished for five hours at or near the opening of a sewer. Eugene felt no ill effects till reaching his friend's here, and was to sail on the following day for Germany, where he was to be met by Ernest Becker of the university, when he was taken ill with typhoid fever. Of course everything mortals could do was done.

"The case was considered light, but when I learned of my boy's illness I came on and arrived here three days too late, for he had died, conscious, however, to the last."

The Professor is much overcome by his bereavement, and is still undetermined whether to take the body to California or bury it here. His plans rendered largely in this son, who was anxious to be an electrical engineer, and gave great promise when at college.

The popularity of young Hilgard is shown by the number of consoling telegrams received by his father from university associates of his son.

Henry Villard is a cousin of Professor Hilgard, the railroad magnate's real name being Hilzard Villard, but he dropped Hilgard while a newspaper correspondent during the war.

On the evening when Eugene fell sick it had been arranged that he and Miss Villard, who is an accomplished violinist, should play duets together for the entertainment of a party of friends.

CROUP.

Some Reading That Will Prove Interesting to Young Mothers.

HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THE DISEASE.

Croup is the terror of young mothers, especially during the early winter months, as it is then most prevalent. To post them concerning the cause, first symptoms, treatment and how to prevent it, is the object of this article.

The origin of croup is a common cold, children that are subject to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first symptoms of croup is hoarseness, it is a peculiar hoarseness, easily recognized and once heard always remembered. Usually a day or two before the attack the child becomes hoarse and gradually shows symptoms of having taken cold, and this is where the mistake is usually made, the mother thinking as her child has just taken cold, gives it no especial attention until awakened in the night by the violent coughing of the child, finds it has the croup and remembers it has had a cold or been hoarse for a day or two. Such circumstances often occur, and in many cases the mother does nothing in the house that will relieve it, and may be several miles from a physician or drug store. You can imagine the situation and her distress. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse or shows symptoms of having taken cold; if Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is freely given from that time on all tendency to croup will disappear and all danger be avoided. The remedy prevents fully ten thousand cases of croup every year. It is the main reliance with many mothers throughout the Western States and Territories.

For Sweet Charity.

A company of amateur performers will give Romeo and Juliet at Dietz Opera House on Monday night for the benefit of a charitable institution. In the cast will appear a number of society young people, and the stage settings will all be furnished gratis by Henry Schellhaas, the great furniture man, at Eleventh and Franklin streets. He has just received a new line of household furniture and some of those combination kitchen tables. Don't fail to see them.

Epidemic Just Now.

"Oh, I wish I were a man" is an exclamation heard most every day from the lips of some fair Oaklander, which betokens something wrong somewhere with the fair sex of this city. One of them got confidential this morning and explained the reason of the saying. "There is not a woman in this town", said she," who does not wish she were a man, so that she might wear a pair of Joe Lancaster's pants." Lancaster's clothes are the finest made in the State. To be in style you must order a suit of him.

Vive Boulanger.

General Boulanger's defeat at the election in France on Sunday last is accredited to the fact that he did not make stump speeches enough. Instead, the old warrior sent his picture throughout the French Republic, but they were so poor that the people would not vote for such a looking man. Boulanger has at last taken the advice of friends and will come to Oakland, where he will let Ormsby the Photographer make his photos. With Ormsby's pictures he is sure of success, so is every body else.

A Walking Exhibit.

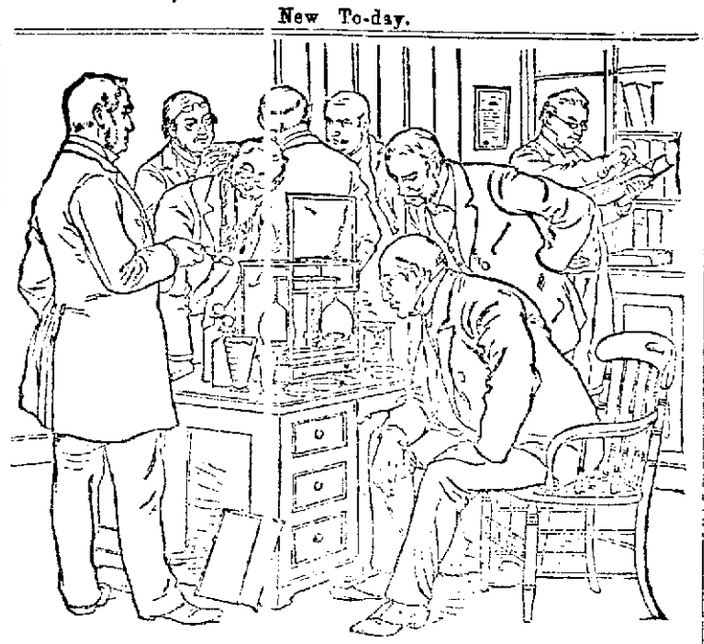
It is proposed by the California State Board of Trade to make the next Eastern traveling exhibit more general than the former one. Even the agents in charge of the cars will be walking exhibits, for they will each wear a suit of clothes made by O'Connor, the tailor, at 1010 Broadway. His new stock of fall and winter goods is something superb, and an inspection is invited. Clothes are cut in the latest Parisian styles.

Secure Long Life.

One of the most important factors in the preservation of health is the selection of the food we eat, particularly meats. The freshest, healthiest, purest and best should always be obtained. This can be done without any difficulty by patronizing T. J. Crowley, at the Eastern Market, 1581 New Broadway. He has already established a reputation among housekeepers, that is the envy of all other market-men. His stall fed beef, veal, mutton, lamb and pork, choice hams, corned beef and salt pork are without superior in this city.

When at a loss to know what to have for a dessert at dinner, order a quart or more of Lehnhardt's delicious ice cream, delivered without extra charge to all parts of the city. Lehnhardt's fine confectionery, 471 Fourteenth st., next door to Postoffice.

New To-day.



THE advantage of using an article that is pure and always uniform, is, you are certain of having the same satisfactory results. Eight prominent Professors of Chemistry, of national reputation, have analyzed the IVORY SOAP, and the variation in each is so trifling that the quality of the "Ivory" may be considered reliably uniform. Each pronounced it to be remarkably pure, and a superior laundry soap.

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but are all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NORMAL CLASS.

The Rev. E. S. Chapman Will Institute One at East Oakland.

The Rev. E. S. Chapman of East Oakland writes: "Permit me to announce through your columns to the Sunday school workers and Bible students of Oakland that I have made arrangements to conduct a Sunday School Normal Class in the chapel of the Brooklyn Presbyterian Church on each Thursday evening during the next six months. This will not be a teachers' meeting for lesson study, nor a Bible correspondence school, but a regular Normal class for drill and instruction in Bible study and bible teaching. All who desire to do so, whether teachers or not, can join this class and must inform me at once, as the books must be ordered from the East on Monday, September 30th, and the meetings of the class will begin as soon as the books are secured. During two years I have gone to Central Oakland to conduct a Bible Correspondence School, and during this year. I bid all who wish such instruction a hearty welcome to the Chapel of the Brooklyn Church. This will be an entirely undenominational course of study and instruction, and I hope much better than any course we have pursued. The only expense will be 60 cents for a Normal text book. I ask for the publication of this in answer to numerous inquiries from members of former classes."

The latest intelligence received from Rev. Mr. Cook of the North Oakland Congregational Church indicates that he is rapidly regaining his health, and may be expected to resume his pastorate at no distant date.

A writer in the Pacific says: "The story of the thank-offering by the ladies of Dr. McLean's church touched a deep chord in my heart. Why cannot all the churches have thank-offerings, even the small churches, once a year? Then we could bring our thank-offerings of praise with sincere hearts. I hope we shall have more reports of the same kind."

Tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock Rev. E. S. Chapman, D.D., of East Oakland Presbyterian Church, will, by special request, deliver an address before the Young Men's Christian Association of San Francisco, at their hall on Sutter street, on "The Authenticity of the Bible." The doctor delivered this address in Monterey a few weeks ago, and it is said to be a most interesting and convincing argument.

Rev. Thomas Kirby of this city, left with his brother, Rev. Father Kirby of St. Mary's Cathedral, San Francisco, on a visit to his home in Ireland about a year ago in very bad health. Last Monday evening the two brothers returned to San Francisco, the first named having fully regained his health. He not yet been assigned to a parish. When he left he was assistant to Rev. Father McSweeney of St. Frances de Sales Church.

Rev. Dr. Boyns, who takes Rev. T. A. Atkinson's place at the Asbury Methodist Church, has been at Hollister during the past three years in charge of the Methodist Episcopal Church in that town. Rev. T. A. Atkinson goes to Ukiah by his own choice to take charge of the church there. Mr. Atkinson has made a great number of friends here during his pastorate of two years, and has done so much in building up the church and increasing its usefulness that he now finds his strength overtaxed. While he regrets to leave his friends in Oakland, he thinks the change will be beneficial.

No Objection to That.

Joseph Patmer has applied to the Council for permission to construct a sewer in Sixteenth street, from Campbell street to the bay, at his own expense.

THE SABBATH.

Today's Proceedings at the Camp Meeting.

A MODEL SABBATH SCHOOL SESSION.

The Sermon of Professor A. T. Jones on Righteousness and the Law—Notes and Personals.

This morning at the Adventists' camp meeting, after the 8 o'clock district meetings, the Sabbath school held a session under Rev. R. S. Owen. The school was so large that it was found necessary to divide the Senior and the Intermediate and Primary Departments in two parts. The attendance was as follows: Senior Department, 679 pupils, divided into eighty-two classes; Intermediate Department, 193 pupils, divided into twenty-four classes; and Primary Department, 205 pupils, divided into thirty-three classes. The Senior Department occupies the large tent under Rev. R. S. Owen.

Mr. Owen opened the school with a few remarks, saying that he was glad the school was so large, but he was sorry that they could not all meet together.

The classes then devoted a short time to recitation.

W. C. White told of the Hamburg Mission and how they had established a mission there because it was a very cosmopolitan town, and could reach the whole world. He told how Brother L. R. Conradi had been imprisoned in Russia and had nearly been sent to Siberia for preaching the Seventh Day Adventist doctrine, but where they had fifty believers there before they now have 250.

At 10:45 Rev. A. T. Jones preached from Matthew XXIV, 26th.

"It is that part of the verse that tells of his righteousness that we want to say, if we have not the righteousness of God we have in reality, no righteousness whatever, and nothing short of the pure righteousness of God will do us any good. We must seek for that in the right way. We must seek for the right kind, or it will do us no good. We must seek for it in the right way or it will do us no good. We must not only seek for the righteousness of God in the right way, but we must seek for it in the right place, or we cannot find it, and it will do us no good. The old Hebrews sought for righteousness by the law of God. They sought for it in the wrong place. It can not be found in the ten commandments, and I don't think that all these people all died in Paul's day. In the first three verses of the second chapter of Romans Paul says that these people sought righteousness in the word of the laws and did not seek the righteousness of God, but sought to establish their own righteousness. It is the righteousness, of God and not of the word that we want. If we can attain to righteousness by the law, what is the use of faith, or of the Gospel, or of Christ? If righteousness can come to anybody in this world through the ten commandments, then Christ came to this world in vain. By the law we can only get our own righteousness, but by Christ we can get the righteousness of God, for Christ was God. This is not saying that righteousness is not in the law. The law is the will of God, and if we have the righteousness demanded by the law, we will have the righteousness of God, but it can not be obtained by the law alone. It is impossible that we can be better than is required by the Ten Commandments. It is impossible for God to be better than is required by the law, for the law is his will, and he cannot be better than himself. It is God's idea of perfection that we must meet, and not our idea of perfection, for our idea is imperfect. God is perfect, and his law is perfect; God is holy, and His law is holy; God is just and His law is just; God is pure and His law is pure, for His law is a transcript of Himself. We are imperfect and we cannot keep a perfect law. The law of God cannot overlook a single sin, even in thought, and if we are not absolutely perfect we are lost to all eternity as far as the law is concerned. But righteousness comes by the gospel of Christ, and by faith in Him. As we are not perfect in the law, so God has sent Christ for a redemption, that we might be saved in the faith of Christ and his gospel. The righteousness of God is therefore in Christ, and not in the law. It is God's righteousness that He wants us to have, and all that He wants us to do is to take it. It is a free gift, and the only trouble is that we won't believe that He wants us to take it. We think that we must work for it. A bad man cannot keep a good law, and we cannot keep the perfect law of God. All that we can do is to take righteousness when God gives it to us. Christ alone lived a perfect life and keeps the law. Christ is God's idea of a man, and his idea is that a man will do right for the love of right. God wants us to meet temptations, and to be men enough to overcome them. That is the trouble of all the Sunday law legislation. They want to take away all temptation from us. If God had wanted to do this He could have removed temptation entirely. But you may wonder what the use of the law is. The law will show us every sin that we have ever committed, and then Christ will remove these sins and we will be perfect in the sight of the law."

Mr. Jones interspersed his remarks by reading from the Scriptures, mostly from the writings of St. Paul, passages showing the biblical statements upon which he based his sermon.

Mrs. E. G. White spoke at 2:30.

Elder H. A. St. John will preach this evening at 7:30.

There will be preaching tomorrow at 10:45, 2:30 and 7:30.

Yesterday Afternoon's Session.

Mrs. E. G. White, who has recently arrived on the grounds, spoke yesterday, taking her subject from the fourteenth chapter of St. John.

She told of the promises of God to those on earth and how heaven was watching with the greatest concern the struggle that was going on upon this earth between the powers of light and the powers of darkness. She urged all to begin the crusade against evil and to enrol themselves under the blood-stained banner of Prince Emanuel. We can give no excuse now for not so doing, and how much less can we give an excuse on the Judgment Day. In Christ is united divinity and humanity, for he took our nature to save us. All that we have to do is to allow him to draw us to him by his wondrous love.

Professor A. T. Jones preached to an immense crowd at 7:30 o'clock in the evening.

He spoke of faith in God and the necessity of increasing our knowledge of the Almighty each day. Unless we know more of God today than we did yesterday we could not say that we had made any progress in the Christian life. Faith is the beginning of all knowledge, and faith is believing and not trying to believe. If we believe the things that God has told us then nothing on earth can with hold his blessings from us. God had the power to raise Christ from the dead and set him above all things, and if we will only put our trust in God he can do any thing for us. Christ has not the power to save us from sin, but from sinning if we will only trust in him.

THE WRONG SHE.

A Juror's Prejudice Against Being Taken From His Business.

C. B. Rice is a stout mechanic living in East Oakland. He was summoned to serve as a juror in the Police Court. When asked this morning by Deputy District Attorney Nusbaumer if he would try the case impartially, he promptly answered "No, sir."

"Why not?"

"Because I have a prejudice against taking a man away from his business to serve as a juror in the Police Court. I have made up my mind how I should vote. I am against the man who brings me in here, and I should vote against the plaintiff."

"But the plaintiff is the people of the State, and the defendant call for a jury and brings you in here."

"I do not care. I should side with the defendant."

"Do you answer as you do upon principle or merely to evade your duty to serve as a juror?" sternly asked Judge Laudlaw.

"From principle," replied the juror, and he was excused.

The case on trial was one in which Nels Johnson was accused of maintaining a public nuisance by obstructing Eighth street east of Broadway with an express wagon. The testimony showed that the tenants of C. Bauer's building on the southeast corner of Eighth street and Broadway object to Johnson's wagon, because they want to use the stand themselves. The jury acquitted the defendant.

COUNTY SCHOOLS.

A Teacher Who Says He Played in Hard Luck.

MEETING OF THE COUNTY EDUCATORS

Arrangements Completed for the County Teachers' Institute to Convene Next Wednesday.

The County Board of Education held a regular meeting at the Courthouse today. There were present President Lynch and Directors Campbell, Ludlow, Dickson, and Secretary Fisher. The board granted grammar grade certificates to Sarah Batton, Daisy Robbins, Franz Manasse and Mary E. Stone. A primary certificate was granted to Miss B. M. Plank.

The board then adjourned and held a meeting as a Committee of the Whole on graduation. The advisability of holding examinations in the country schools this fall was discussed at length and it was finally decided to hold examinations only in the Sixth and Seventh grades in the District schools. The committee then decided to meet two weeks from today and prepare questions in grammar, geography, arithmetic and spelling. The purpose of the examination is simply to ascertain what the advanced pupils in the district schools are doing. In the summer time a great many of the pupils are taken out of school to assist in the harvest field and thus miss the semi-annual examinations. It is now proposed to catch them at school in the fall. Of course this fall no examinations will be held in villages and towns, as the regular semi-annual examinations took place in June. Mr. Campbell will prepare the questions in grammer, Mr. Lynch in geography, Mr. Fisher in arithmetic and Mr. Dickson in speling. Mr. Fisher reported that there are fifty school districts outside of Oakland, Alameda, and Berkeley. The committee then adjourned.

Miss Flora De Wolf, who has been elected to a position in the Clawson school, is temporarily filling the position of Principal of the Front Vale school, vice Miss Dolman, who was granted a leave of absence. Miss Dolman has recuperated and will resume her duties next week.

County Superintendent Fisher reports that there is a great demand for teachers holding first grade certificates. He states that he has not enough applications at his office to fill the demand. In this county there are no vacancies at present, but Mr. Fisher is constantly receiving letters from all parts of the State, asking him to send teachers to fill positions who hold first grade certificates.

F. G. Harriman of this county, a school teacher by profession, remarked to Mr. Fisher yesterday that he has been playing in hard luck of late. He secured a school up country, but before he could take it found it necessary to secure an educational diploma. He sent in his credentials to Mr. Fisher, which were forwarded to the State Board of Education, and the diploma was returned. From the credentials it appeared that the gentleman had only taught thirty-four and one half months, when the law requires that he shall have taught thirty-five months before he is entitled to an educational diploma. Hence Mr. Harriman is disappointed.

The committee of country teachers who have in charge the reception to be given to the city teachers next Wednesday night met at Mr. Fisher's office this morning and completed arrangements. A musical and literary programme has been arranged, after which dancing will be indulged in. Cavalry Hall has been engaged for the reception.

The teachers' institute will convene at Hamilton Hall next Wednesday morning at 9:15 o'clock. Every teacher who fails to report without being excused, will be docked a day's salary. It is expected that Mayor John L. Glascock will deliver the address of welcome to the teachers. W. C. Jones of the University has been invited to address the teachers on the "Unity of Education." A. L. Mann will close the discussion on "Morals and Manners."

Mr. Fisher has received word from Joaquin Miller, the poet, that he would like to be present at the Institute when John P. Irish addresses the teachers. Mr. Irish has not as yet made known the subject of his lecture.

One Touch of Nature.

New York Sun.

It was a touching story which the late Lord Shaftesbury told of some roughs in the East End of London. A young clergyman in one of the most wretched parishes had asked his advice as to how to deal with the terrible human vice and misery of the place. Lord Shaftesbury had counselled him to begin by establishing a ragged school, and had at the same time furnished the necessary funds. The school met with immediate success, but it was impossible, in spite of all the vicar's efforts, to induce the people to come to church, and the young clergyman finally resolved to meet them by preaching in the open air. He selected one of the worst courts, and had the benches from the school taken there for his hearers to sit upon, but was dismayed when he came upon the scene to see the front row occupied by a number of the most notorious roughs of the neighborhood, who, he made no doubt, had come to break up the services. To his surprise, however, everything went off quietly, and when the services were over he stepped up to the leader of the gang, told him he had not expected to see him there, though he was very glad to welcome him, and asked what had brought him. The man said:

"Well, sir, you've been very good to our little kids, so I said to my mates: 'Parson's goin' to preach in —— court on Sunday night. It's a roughish place. Let's go and see fair play.' That's what brought us."

Poker Clubs for Women.

Washington Letter to Louisville Courier-Journal.

The fascinating game of draw poker will be more popular this winter in Washington among the fashionable women than ever before. Several new poker clubs will be organized. The ladies play for bonbons, gloves, etc., and very often for cash. The games are, as a rule, for a small limit, but they get as much enjoyment out of them as if thousands changed hands. The wife of one of the Senators was much worried because her husband lost so much at poker and determined that, if he must play and must lose, he should play with her, and she would benefit by his losing. She learned the game thoroughly, surrounded her table with good players, and a handsome lot in the northwestern part of the town is the result of her venture, and she is still winning—probably playing with an idea of putting a house on her lot.

DAHL LIED.

Word Received From the Ranch Where He Said He Worked.

District Attorney Reed and Deputy Sheriff Jamieson held a consultation this morning as to what course to pursue in the case of Henry Dahl who is now in the County Jail on suspicion of being the assailant of little Jessie Moran. Dahl stated that at the time the offense was committed he was working for a man named Patterson in Stanislaus county. This morning a brother of Mr. Patterson called at the Sheriff's office and stated that his brother had left for the East in June last and consequently Dahl could not have worked for him in July. So the prisoner has been trapped on a most important point. Mr. Reed, however, thinks the evidence against Dahl at present is very meager and has advised that he be not imprisoned any longer than is necessary. It is probable that the man will be given his freedom either tonight or tomorrow as the officers cannot establish a case against him.

WHO OWNS THE BABY?

A Young Man Who Wanted the Parents Arrested.

About a month ago the gossips of the little town of Centerville were set talking by the finding of an infant on the doorstep of the home of a prominent merchant in the town. District Attorney Reed was consulted as to what should be done with the baby and advised that it be given to some family who might desire to raise the little one. This course was pursued and the child is now being well cared for. This morning a young man called upon the District Attorney and stated that he knows who is the father of the child and desired to ascertain if he could be prosecuted for deserting the babe. Mr. Reed advised that as the baby is being well cared for it would be useless to drag the parents before the Court. The young man accepted the advice and concluded that he would let the matter rest and not make public the names of the parents.

THE RUSSIAN NIHILISTS.

William J. Armstrong's Lecture in the Congregational Church.

Honorable William Jackson Armstrong of Washington, D. C., will deliver his famous lecture, "The Russian Nihilists," in the First Congregational Church on Monday evening, October 7th. This is in response to a written request signed by Revs. J. K. McLean, C. W. Wendte, E. R. Dille, Dan P. A. Horton and C. C. Stratton. Mr. Armstrong is said to be a very eloquent and powerful speaker, and his lecture one of the most brilliant and graphic expositions of Siberian exile and slavery ever presented to the civilized world.

WHAT A LOG JAM LOOKS LIKE.

Millions of Feet of Logs Piled Up in the St. Croix River.

St. Paul Pioneer Press.

It would be hard to find two words which, separated, would convey less of the picturesque than "log" and "jam"—put them together and they describe a marvelous and decidedly picturesque sight any one may enjoy by visiting the St. Croix river above the rapids at Taylor's falls. Hundreds of people—eight cars on the St. Paul and Duluth, well laden—from St. Paul and many from other places visited this labyrinth of lumber recently, and enjoyed as well the pretty picture the pine fringed river makes as it runs between the high rock banks in the dalles, at the town of Taylor's Falls. The log jam is the feature of the summer at the pretty resorts on the Minnesota and Wisconsin shores of the river respectively.

The first view of the jam is disappointing. It looks as if some gigantic kid, emulating ordinary children, had aroused himself, building all sorts of structures with tree trunks for blocks, and, tiring of his efforts, had toppled over his handiwork at one fell swoop. Confusion worse confounded has resulted. Far as the eye can reach, along the gorge where generally the quick stream gleams and ripples in the sun, are piled logs of all sizes, barked and barkless, glistening with exuding resin and gray in the death of many seasons, twisted, broken, interlocked, reared high in air, piled fathoms deep, moist with the hurrying current underneath or laid in helter-skelter fashion on the rocky banks.

For two miles or more this corduroy and decidedly uneven bridge spans the stream, the height of the serrated footpath varying from five to twenty feet above the water. All this came from one obstinate trunk which stuck on a protruding boulder during a recent drive, and was so buttressed, hedged about, aided and abetted, that the enormous weight of water and wood pressing upon the obstruction failed to move it. No one remembers having seen a jam at this particular point before, though one is almost sure to form two miles or more down stream, at the head of the dalles proper. Three years ago a jam with more than a hundred million feet of lumber in its rigid enforcing formed lower down, and the tail extended above the head of the present one.

When the existing jam formed several days ago engines were taken thither, and many men tried with their aid to loosen the logs, and set them floating toward Stillwater and gangs of saws. They got the primary obstructions out of the way, but the drive above—there are 130,000,000 feet up river yet—kept pressing on the jam, and more firmly rooting it between the banks. One of the dams up stream was opened, but the increment of current and volume was too slight to break this natural and evolutionary abattis. To-morrow engines will be taken to the jam again, and 160 skilled lumbermen—knights of the spiked shoe and steel tipped lance—will try to break the bond the huge conifers have wrought. Other dams have been opened, and more will be, and it is hoped disruption will ensue through the force of the rising waters.

It will be a sight worth many miles to travel to see when the jam does break up. Probably no better idea of resistless force can be conveyed than will be shown by this huge jack of pines when in the throes of dissolution.

There are times when a feeling of lassitude will overcome the most robust when the system craves for pure blood, to furnish the elements of health and strength. The best remedy for purifying the blood is Dr. J. H. McLean's Sarsaparilla.

A CONTRAST

Drawn Between Two Classes of Homes,

AS THEY EXIST IN THIS COUNTRY.

And Appear to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union—Liquor Dealer's Convention.

The seventh annual convention of the wine, liquor, and beer dealers of the state of New York, lately held at Rochester, was honored by the presence of the city's Mayor, who welcomed the convention in the warmest terms. The most important business was transacted with closed doors, but the convention did not hesitate to demand the right to sell liquor not only all day for six days in the week, but also eight hours on the holy sabbath.—National W. C. T. U. Bulletin.

I saw the homes from which these liquor dealers came. Costly mansions rising in superb arch tectural beauty in the midst of grounds almost a paradise on earth. Within they tread upon the softest carpets, while the most luxurious furniture adorns their elegant parlors. Sweet toned pianos make the home resonant with melody. The air is heavy with the perfumed breath of exquisite flowers. Pictures gleam from the walls, and books, many a set elegant, fill the rooms.

I saw their tables loaded with the choicest viands. Smoking meats, savory vegetables, delicious coffee and the most delicate French pastry tempted the appetite, while fine china silver on snowy linen made the picture complete in loveliness.

But I saw other homes, and Oh, God! there are a hundred thus and seen in our land hovels and tenement houses where rags and old hats take the place of glass. Gates and doors hang upon one hinge. The tumble down roofers in water and the paint has long since been washed from off the dingy gray lumber. Instead of flowers and trees rendering beauty and shade, putrid, decaying vegetable and refuse matter breeds foul disease and death.

Within all is even still more desolate. No carpets, even of the coarsest, deaden the noise or hide the dirty unsightly floors. The scanty furniture is broken, defaced and greasy. No pianos, no flowers, no pictures, no books make these homes attractive, did I say? Ah, the very name is mockery—place of music there are oaths and curses. Instead of flowers, dirt and squalor. Instead of books, a pawnbroker's receipt for half their value. Instead of pictures, broken plaster and smutty wall-paper.

As for their table, need I describe the bill of fare of a drunkard's family? The shrunken eyes, the fleshless limbs, the bony hands of the skinny, emaciated wife and children tell the story of slow starvation with a pathos which burning words cannot depict.

I saw these men wearing fine broadcloth, spotless linen, and shining silk hats. Massive gold chains attached to elegant watches glittered against the black vests, and rings whose jewels rivaled the sun's rays in dazzling brilliancy adorned their white hands free from any signs of labor. I saw their wives and children dressed in silk and satin and lace, decked in gold and precious stones, radiant and beautiful.

But I saw hordes of other men and our cities swarm with them, whose only clothing is filthy rags, for their money has gone to pay for the fine watches and rings which these lady liquor dealers wear. I saw too their wives and children, and God pity them! Was there silk and satin and gold and precious stones? Ah, no, for even calico. The childish feet were bare, the tender little bodies shivering with cold, sore from the blows of a drunken father—dirty, unkempt and ragged—whose only heritage is one of disease and poverty. God have mercy on these multitudes of little ones, robbed of everything in life by these hellish saloon keepers, whose infamous crime is legalized and licensed by Christian (?) men. What more atrocious cruelty could devils incarnate commit?

And the wives of these drunkards! my very heart aches for them. One look in their sad, hopeless eyes tells too plainly the burden life is to them. They have watched little by little all hope fade out of their desolate existence. They have seen their husbands pay out the money which ought to go for bread and coal and clothing, over the bar of the liquor dealer that his children may dress like little princes while their own may go like beggars. And the stuff for which these miserable drinkers bartered their home, their wife and their little ones sent them home demons of hate and cruelty.

In this liquor dealers' convention I heard their laughter, their merry jokes, their uproarious fun, their jesting and their songs, and I thought what a splendid business that makes men so happy. But as I listened I heard an undertone wailing of agony from a vast multitude of mothers and wives standing over the dishonored drunkards' graves of a hundred thousand sons and husbands. Amid the laughter I heard the shrieks of women beaten and kicked by drunken husbands. Above the merry jokes I could hear the infantile cries of little children growing louder and louder until they swelled into such a very dirge of anguish that even devils in hell could not help but weep. I underneath the fun and jesting and song came up the cries and struggles of the unhappy victims themselves as writhing in the throes of remorse and shame they tried again and again to break the cruel chains of appetite. Ah! for every laugh there will be tears, for every joke a broken heart, for every jest a tiny coffin, for every rosy song a woman's honor lost. And yet we welcome them.

A Saloon Trust of One.

In Peoria, Ill., a responsible business firm has offered the city authorities $75,000 annually for the exclusive privilege of selling liquor at retail. He engages that the saloons shall be of as unobjectionable character as possible, and that none shall be opened in the vicinity of a school or church, or where they may do injury to any business. They are to be closed every week-day night at 10 o'clock and all day on Sundays; no liquors to be sold to intoxicated persons or minors, and no gambling is to be allowed.

The proposition is said to be under serious consideration by the municipal authorities, and may be accepted.

THE PASSING SHOW

Margaret Mather in the Standard Drama.

GILMORE'S BAND AND VOCALISTS.

The Brass Monkey, Fanny Davenport, McKee Rankin and Little Lord Fauntleroy.

Margaret Mather was very crude when she began to play principal parts. She had ability, but she was very raw. She had ambition, too, if I did not, she would not have treated herself to become the actress that she is. She is now almost the only one who plays "old man" in that fine old comedy, The Honeymoon, that has lived for nearly a century. This romantic composition of John Tobin, which plot the same as Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew, is partly in blank verse, and the language is of the lofty style in which men wrote a century ago. Miss Mather will play The Honeymoon on Tuesday evening next at the Oakland Theater. On Monday evening Miss Mather will play "Juliet." J. E. Stuckey playing "Romeo." This part has been Miss Mather's principal study. When first she made her appearance she played "Juliet" and played it with roughness. The balcony scene was a picture of affection. Now she has learned to play this most trying role that Shakespeare ever wrote for woman to play. In an article relating to Miss Mather's career, The American Boy prints the following: "In Miss Mather's case no trick has been resorted to. Her is the only case within the knowledge of the writer where any public person has taken themselves first to the work, gone personally and devoted themselves vigorously to a calling. No 'Sweet Alice' was ever found more fitly to her creed than is Miss Mather to her chosen profession. She has taken the veil, as it were, and placed between herself and the outside world an impenetrable barrier through which no gossip can enter, except its legitimate channel, only the character she impersonates. Think of it a moment. Five years ago the name of Margaret Mather had never been printed, while to-day every tongue is singing her praises, and newspapers throughout the land are devoting columns to her, still she has never been interviewed."

Herrmann, the prestidigitateur, will present his illusions at the Oakland Theater on the evening of October 7th and 8th.

Charley Hoyt's Bunch Hockey, now playing at the California Theater, will be presented at the Oakland Theater on October 14th and 15th. The principal part is taken by Charles H. Drew, who has been known to the stage in many characters. For years he was the leading tenor of the Aimee Cortes Opera Company. Then he lost his voice and became the comedian of the Carleton Opera Company playing "Koko" in The Mikado. Now he is in comedy farce.

Great is an étude in Dan for the one night appearance here of the distinguished actress, Fanny Davenport. She will appear in the last great success, La Tosca, the most powerful and realistic of the modern emotional dramas. Mr. Davenport will arrive in town to-day in the magnificent car Al Hayman—the Baldwin and California Theaters, San Francisco, etc. La Tosca will be given here with the perfect cast and success for that signalized its great success at the Baldwin. Miss Davenport's lines at the Oakland Theater are October 8th and 9th.

During the week beginning October 21st McKee Rankin, supported by Mabel Bert and a good company, will play The Breakers' Will and other plays of his repertoire.

Nellie McHenry, formerly of the Salisbury Troubadours, will be here in the latter part of October.

Early in November two evenings will be devoted at the Oakland Theater to rare music. On the evening of November 5th a concert will be given by the vocalists gathered by Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore for his farewell tour. The list of these singers is headed by the great tenor, Italo Campanini. The other singers are: Tenor, Eugene de Dankwardt; soprano, Signorina De Vere, Madame Blanche Stone-Barton; contralto, Helen Dudley Campbell; baritone, Signor Del Puente; bass, Myron W. Whitney.

The following evening, November 6th, Gilmore's Band will give an orchestral concert.

Lotta Local Favorites, under the management of Al Hayman, will be played here on November 12th, 13th, and 14th.

SPLINTERS FROM THE BOARDS.

Count A. Edison, the Last King, is the title of a melodrama now running at one of the minor Parisian theaters.

Sophie Eyre will begin a starring tour in this country on November 4th, opening at the Grand Opera House, San Francisco, in The Widow Cheriet, the play in which she won such success in England. She will not be seen in New York until spring.

Fanny Davenport paid between six and seven thousand dollars for a handsome residence in Santa Monica, in Southern California, that could not have been purchased for twice the amount a year ago. It faces the Pacific Ocean and will be her summer residence hereafter.

Lewis Morrison is using on the advertising street views of a younger brother of Edwin Booth; or else Edwin Booth is taking on the appearance of his brother Lewis Morrison. The resemblance certainly becomes more marked as the season advances.

I am glad to know that Mrs. Langtry is being accepted on a more artistic basis in England than formerly. Here is a case of mind over matter, and not for the first time in the annals of the stage was an eccentric, intelligent, but notorious woman become respectableized through an ambitious study of dramatic art. Tom's one for our side, anyhow! —Dramatic News.

The actress who impersonated the heroine capered through her part like a new branded heifer in fly-time. Her hair was colored in a hue that would invite the attentions of a one-eyed bull a mile away, and the ladies of this town won't get through talking about those second act stockings and what was in them till the next circus strikes us. As for the men, they swear to gracious there isn't a leg among the fair sex in Rapid City. —Dakota Critic.

At Koster & Bial's, New York, while Louise Dempsey and her tuneful support were agitating their understandings to the performance of the convulsing burlesque, an inebriated person, who had been circulating about the house for some time, suddenly jumped up and threw a $5 bill at the stage, yelling, "Go and buy yourself a pair of pants." The bill was captured by the orchestra and devoted to the service of Gambrinus.

While artistic theatrical circles are still pulsating from the shock caused by the cancellation of the dates of our many society stars, a still, small voice whispers of a Freak Trust which is to be formed by Managers Barnum and Bailey. The report has caused quite a flutter upon the elevated stages of the swell museums, and has hushed, for the nonce, the light and airy bandinage of the ossified man, while the two headed boy and the lady with phenomenal adipose tissue have relapsed into moody silence.

"When Mrs. James Brown Potter sailed for Europe she went to seek rest and seclusion. She had worked faithfully in her profession and desired a season of retirement. Mrs. Potter was in ill health. It is a debasement of journalism to invade the privacy of this woman, to break into her chosen retreat and then utter foul and unchivalrous insinuations. There can be no possible excuse for such persecution." The above is from the editorial columns of the New York Herald. Mrs. Potter voluntarily and deliberately placed herself in a position, by her association with Kyrle Bellew, to bring out the "foul and unchivalrous insinuations," and she has nobody to blame for them but herself. Her clinging to that individual professionally despite the exposure of his character and antecedents, and her continued close intimacy with him abroad in defiance of propriety and the protests of her friends and family, shows that she is not at all sensitive regarding her own good name or the criticisms that are written of her. There is very little sympathy wasted on Mrs. Potter by right-minded persons, in our opinion, and, outside of the chivalrous Herald writer, she gets very little.—Dramatic News.

This is the way that Adelina Patti is said to have summed up her good points in accounting for her success in the operatic stage:

I am not beautiful but I am pretty—that's one.

I am tolerably graceful—that's two.

I am a good dresser—that's three.

I have a way with me that is piquant—that's four.

I like my public for my public like me because I like them and never tire of pleasing them;—that's five.

I have a good voice—that's six.

I know how to sing well—my way—that's seven.

I always know my music—that gives comfort to the audience—and may account as eight.

I act fairly well with the roles I sing—that's nine.

What more could one want in a singer?

Ned Buckley, when a young man was playing out West in the mining towns with a traveling company. He had a wild ambition to play "Claude Melnotte," and one night, the leading man being sick, he went to the manager and suggested that they put on The Lady of Lyons and let him play "Claude."

"My boy," replied the manager "the miners will shoot you."

"Why?"

"They will never stand such a love sick play."

Ned was willing to risk it, however, and as there was not much choice the manager let him go ahead. He was just delivering himself of those beautiful lines in the second act about "orange groves," etc., when he chanced to glance toward the audience and saw a big miner standing up pointing a six-shooter at him. He stopped short in his love-making, undecided whether to run or stand his ground, when another miner came to his rescue.

"Hold on, Bill," called out No. 2, "don't shoot Claude Melnotte, he's a good fellow, I know it, 'cause I got full with him yesterday."

"If you say he's all right, pard, I won't," answered No 1, "but I'm —— if I don't have a shot at Pauline."—Detroit Free Press.

W. S. Cleveland, the harum-scarum minstrel advertiser, is guilty of the following publication:

W. S. Cleveland is in need of help! W. S. Cleveland, with all his liberality, can't spend his money as fast as he makes it, in spite of extravagant advertising and prodigal salary expenditure. The distressed Sheriff dodgers and Constable eluders, the measly mountebank's managers who avoid salaries, skin hotel bills, and fly-by-nights haunted from pillar to post, and cry for help as they traipse over the hills to the poor house! tenderly treading on highway-worn corns and pavement-heated, burning bunions. Particularly from the South, the beautiful sunny clime, comes up a cry, a wail of distress, that their fair land should be again invaded by the man-who-never-pays, the great chief of all the stand-offs, he who owes them all, an imitative outfit on without commercial honor or artistic merit, who, without the evidence of a receipted bill, hoists one poor, dingy rag with which, before the end of the season, he may be able to escape to the woods, enwrapped in its folds, following the quick-moving flight of an oft-thrashed advance agent who looks well to his advance route, and like a good general, to the protection of his rear. Where now will the ruin-run renegade set foot when the land of the magnolia spurns him and frigid Canada barrels him over the border? Where? Where but to his lair in New York State, where the postal authorities will be overwhelmed by the number of duns that will arrive by every mail, for the balance of his days to imitate for the nonce himself to the verge of idiocy.

When you feel a general lassitude and breaking down of the system, Angostura Bitters will work a wonderful change. Dr. J. G. B. Siegert & Sons, Manufacturers.

In that lady at the lecture the other night only knew how nicely Hall's Hair Renewer would remove dandruff and improve the hair she would buy a bottle.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Called.

I am coming, I have heard you;
I am coming, O, my dear!
I have heard you calling, calling,
When the night was dimly falling,
Calling through the midnight
When the dark was deep and clear,
Softly in the midnight I have heard you calling, dear.

I have heard you in the morning,
I heard your whisper at my ear;
Like a sleeping bird that singeth
Or a low sweet wind that bringeth
The summer blossoms here.
I have listened for you, darling,
I have waited for you, dear,
Till my soul was faint with rapture and with fear.

Come once again and call me;
Call me very clear and loud,
As the thunder calls from heaven
Through the listening summer even,
In its solemn silver cloud.
Call me upward to your dwelling,
Tho' the river waves be swelling,
And the valley dark with shadow I shall answer you aloud.

I have waited long and lonely,
So lonely, O my dear!
My sad thoughts cling about you,
I cannot live without you,
I am coming to your calling,
I cannot linger here;
When dawn is on the mountains I am coming to you, dear.

I have done with time and sorrow,
I am ready for you, dear;
In your dumb and pallid sleeping,
You could not hear my weeping,
But I wept my soul away saying here.
O, seraphs! hush your singing,
O, bells of heaven, cease ringing!
O, waters of the river, mourn no more;
For my peace has come forever,
I shall weep and wander never,
I shall be alone and lonely nevermore.

A SUCCESSFUL COMPANY.

A Record Unequaled in the History of Express Companies.

Two years ago there was a little four wagon express company started and called the "People's Express Company." From the first success stared the company in the face, and owing to the prompt and careful attention to business and being in the hands of good managers it is today the most extensive and best conducted company on the coast, and its patrons have placed the stamp of their approval upon the above statement. It runs the largest and most costly wagons that cross the bay, manufactured expressly for it, and unparalleled in structure, some being especially built to carry furniture and pianos while others are for heavy freight, safes, etc. This company's baggage system is beyond the possibility of questioning, the most reliable and prompt medium of transportation. It checks baggage at hotels or residences to all parts of the United States. Office 423 Tenth street. Telephone 326.
